Broke Out With a Rash. Would Scratch Until It Got Sore. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in a Couple of Weeks.

2519 No. Jessup St., Philadelphia, Pa.—"My baby was only a couple of months old when I noticed eruptions coming on her face. It broke out with a rash on her cheeks. It looked awfully sore and it used to itch so she kept rubbing it when she was awake, she would scratch it till it got sore. I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in the paper and I sent for a sample which I used. In a couple of days I saw her face looked much better so I bought some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and in a couple of weeks she was cured and hasn't had anything like it since." (Signed) Mrs. Katie Ward, March 27, 1913.

BURNING ITCHY INFLAMED LEG

463 Markle St., Philadelphia, Pa.—"The trouble began from a scratch on the leg from the finger nail. The part itched. I scratched it and a sore formed, a running sore very much inflamed. It would not heal. It was very itchy and burning and caused annoyance. I used a bandage all the time. My leg was sore about four weeks when I started to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In three days I noticed a change and in two weeks' time the sore was healed completely." (Signed) Miss Lena Rogman, May 2, 1913.

Altoona Is Not Much Interested in Strike

The Altoona Times, commenting on the strike situation, says: "Altoona shopmen are giving no outward signs of their interest in the strike of the Brotherhood of Federated Railway Employees. They are sticking to their work, and this was evidenced yesterday when the new Brotherhood endeavored to stir up sympathy among workmen at the entrance at Ninth avenue and Fourteenth street. It was futile and no recruit was received by the organization."

"There is no strike in this city, the Federated Railway Employees' organization simply endeavoring to stir up strike agitation. Thus far they have been unsuccessful and indications are that they will remain so. Vice-President McDevitt, of the organization, and possibly fifty of the members held a noonday meeting at Ninth avenue and Fourteenth street. McDevitt spoke, the shopmen listened, but when the shop whistle blew the men went back to their work. Last evening the Railway Employees held a meeting in the hall behind closed doors and nothing was given out for publication."

"Workmen returning from Enola and Harrisburg yesterday stated that all was quiet about the shops there; that generally the strikers were not causing any annoyance to workmen and behaving themselves. One of the men stated that there were possibly two hundred Altoona workmen on duty at Enola that they took their meals on the commissary car, that they were being treated right and had not been molested by the strikers. The man says that all is quiet about the shops and that one would not know there was a strike on it if it were not for the talk of the men concerning the strike situation at Harrisburg."

head of a brotherhood. Wait until the meeting to-night and see what is said. He laughs best who laughs last. Representatives of the two brotherhood organizations who are here would not intimate what they will tell the men who attend the meeting to-night. Those here are Arthur J. Lovell, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, and Valentine Fitzpatrick, of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. Both these officials did deny that they were in conference with the railroad officials yesterday and say they want it understood that they are here in accordance with their duties as vice-presidents of the orders they represent.

Trainmen Warned
The statement that Fitzpatrick was in conference with members of the various lodges of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and that members of these lodges would not mix up in the strike controversy was confirmed. Representatives of the trainmen were given passports to the Pennsylvania Railroad yards last night and took with them a letter from the trainmen's representative calling attention to the trainmen's agreement with the Pennsylvania Railroad and warning them of the results if the agreement is violated.

Crowds Not So Large
Crowds were not so large about strike headquarters to-day as they have been during previous days. It was explained that the men were all out working with the pickets and attempting to round up recruits.

No Trouble Expected
General Navarette's assurances, although not reaching the American headquarters in official form, have served to convince General Funston that there is no intention to precipitate trouble at this juncture.

There does exist here, however, a vague apprehension of important developments at the capital. This is not traceable to any specific information and in no quarter could there be found any tangible evidence on which to base this theory. Staff officers and many away from the city, however, appear convinced that Provisional President Huerta must face a crisis within a few days.

Leaders Want to Quit
It appears improbable that the rebels will be in position to attack the capital for many days and perhaps weeks, but there is a growing feeling of unrest among the residents, and a few high officers in the army now stationed at Mexico City are said to have been manifesting signs of unwillingness to continue supporting a man whom they regard as already defeated and in whose policy they do not fully agree. Stories that General Huerta is strengthening the city against attack continue to arrive and some are that he is fortifying certain positions and erecting wire entanglements. He has withdrawn to the capital more men from his army, taking troops even from the district between the capital and Vera Cruz.

General Maas has established headquarters at Cordoba and many of his field pieces, which were here a few days ago, have been moved south as far as Pacho del Mecho, where General Rubio Navarette is still located, have been moved north to Cordoba.

No more troops, so far as can be ascertained here, have been moved in the direction of the American outposts.

Urge Americans to Leave
The Mexican outposts, while mostly of a detached character, are almost in sight of the American lines, but it is reasonably certain that the total number of Mexican troops within striking distance is less than 2,000 men.

In view of the undefinable fear that sharp developments at the capital may be of a character to increase the danger of American troops, the American consul here has renewed his efforts to get out, as soon as possible, as many as he can. A train due to-day is reported to have a considerable number of Americans aboard.

The postal authorities are bringing back to Vera Cruz the big pile of mail which is now being soaked in daily rains at the station. Bags of mail intended for Mexico City and other interior points, delivered to the Mexicans some days ago, are as yet unopened.

Soldiers Wanted Money For Protecting Refugees
Galveston, Tex., May 13.—Stories of anti-American riots along the Mexican coast that fringes the Gulf of Tehuantepec and an attempt of a Mexican mob to burn a train bearing the American refugees were told last night by a party of Americans who fled from Mexico to Guatemala and then came here on the steamship Brighton. They left Mapastepec, Chiapas, April 21, because of growing sentiment against Americans. They took the train for Guatemala but on their arrival at Tapachula a mob surrounded the coaches and demanded the delivery of Americans on board. The police guard tried to drive back the Mexicans, who tried to set the passenger coaches on fire.

Federal troops were rushed from a nearby post and for several hours the mob was held in check. Then the officers commanding the train demanded a ransom of the Americans for protection. It appeared, the refugees said, as if the federal officers were about to give the Americans over to the mob when the state militia announced the federal officer for asking for a ransom and the refugees were permitted to depart. They made their way across Guatemala and took the steamship Brighton at Port Barrios.

More Nurses Prepare to Go to Southern Republic
New York, May 13.—The second quota of nurses was to be sent to the front from New York City, according to Miss Annie Rhodes, secretary of the National Red Cross Nursing Service, who said to-day that each of the large cities of the country would be expected to furnish fifty-one nurses for service if conditions in Mexico require the presence of more troops.

Washington, May 13.—(By Mail via New Orleans, May 13.)—The Americanization of Vera Cruz goes steadily forward and everywhere there are evidence of the manifold abilities of the army and navy as advance guards of civilization.

When the American bluejackets first landed here Admiral Fletcher was confronted with finding means of transportation and communication between his outposts. On the customs house wharf there were three large motor trucks, recently purchased in France for Huerta's army and awaiting shipment to Mexico City. There were commandeered and now the cars appear lettered "Q. M. D. U. S. A."

When General Funston established headquarters he found the local telephone system worse than useless. "Have the signal corps establish a telephone system," was the general's order and within two days a modern telephone exchange was operating for

Mexican General Says He Is Not Moving His Troops to Vera Cruz

Vera Cruz, May 13.—General Funston need fear no trouble along his outer lines if a letter sent into the city last night by General Rubio Navarette, in command of the advanced positions of the Mexicans, is a true indication of the Mexicans' attitude.

General Navarette addressed the editor of a local newspaper, Los Suceos, regarding the reported movement by his forces against Vera Cruz. "I beg that you deny this news," said General Navarette, "since in accordance with orders which we have received all offensive movements have been stopped while the armistice lasts."

The Americans are informed regarding the position of the Mexicans in the vicinity of their outposts and they have found some of the complication which might follow the harassing of their lines by small bodies of troops.

AMERICAN SAILORS SOBER
Washington, May 13.—Secretary Daniels announced proudly to-day that he had Admiral Fletcher's word for it that out of the six thousand American sailors and marines who were landed at Vera Cruz when that city was seized not one was at any time found drunk or under the influence of liquor. The secretary agrees with Admiral Fletcher that this makes a new record for the navy and in fact for any navy.

official purposes. The light and power station had been put out of commission by the retreating federals, and the trolley line, which carries passengers at fares of two cents, American money, stopped. While the electrical engineers of the fleet were trying to put the dynamo and generators into working condition the bluejackets pressed into service many little burro carts, which are the ordinary means of commercial transportation of Vera Cruz.

Until the Fifth Army Brigade arrived with its mule trains the little burros did good service. A mule of the Missouri kind, however, can do the
