IT WAS FORCED UPON HIM

At a wedding feast recently the bridegroom was called upon, as usual, to respond to the given toast, in spite of the fact that he had previously pleaded to be excused. Blushing to the roots of his hair, he rose to his feet. He intended to imply that he was unprepared for speechmaking, but he unfortunately placed his hand upon his bride's shoulder, and looked down at her as he stammered out his opening and concluding words: "This—this has been forced upon me."—In National Monthly.

SHE GIGGLED

I went out to walk with Miss Nellie one day. And as we two strolled through the park. I noticed she seemed quite contented and gay. More happy by far than a lark; And whenever I made a remark even plain She would always giggle outpour; And then when I asked her to kindly explain. She giggled—then giggled some more. Then in the evening we went to the play. And although 'twas a tragedy deep She did not the slightest emotion display. But giggled while others would weep. She giggled a bit when the hero was killed. And as the bride came through the door To marry the villain whose conduct had thrilled. She giggled—then giggled some more. So I asked the young lady to tell me just why Her system contained so much mirth. And how she could giggle when others would cry. And when happiness seemed at a dearth. So she said her new hat had the latest-shaped frame. The only one like it in store, And that the other lady could get one the same. Then she giggled—and giggled some more. —John L. Hobbie, in Puck.

HOW TO PREVENT PEOPLE FROM LOOKING INTO WINDOWS

In the "Exchange" department of the Woman's Home Companion—a department given over to practical household suggestions—a North Carolina woman makes the following screen suggestion: "As my kitchen and pantry windows are so placed that the chance passer-by can get good view of the interior of the rooms, I resorted to the following expedient: I had heard that fly screens painted white added to the privacy of a room without obstructing the view from the inside, but as white is too glaring for the color of our house, I used paint of the same color as the weatherboarding, which is a soft yellow. I thinned the paint slightly and applied it with a small brush, and now, even at a very short distance, the interior of the rooms is not visible to those passing."

HE WAS HOPING

A countryman named Street owned a runaway cow. As the season advanced Street was compelled to make several long pilgrimages into the country for the reprehensible animal. On one occasion the trail led on and on until Street had entered the environs of a town where a new trolley car system was installed. Just as the cow-hunter turned a corner in the outskirts the car lumbered up and the conductor called out: "Cedar Street." The owner of the cow stopped in his tracks and bawled back at the man in blue and gold: "No, darn her, I ain't seed her; an' when I do it won't be good fer her, blame'd old hide either!"—In National Monthly.

The Latest Pantalettes Not Like Grandma's

In the June Woman's Home Companion Grace Margaret Goul, fashion editor of that periodical, writes an article entitled "Skirts Flare Out—Behold the Pantalette," in which she comments on the pantalette of to-day and yesterday and other new French fashion frivolities. Following is an extract: "Yes, Grandmamma did wear pantalettes and now Granddaughter has her modern critical eyes upon them. 'Pretot of Paris, who has so quickly forced ahead into fashionable favor, says, 'Pantalettes are not only to be worn but shown.' 'But let me tell you that the new French pantalettes in this up-to-date are far removed from the pantalettes of the remote and romantic days of long ago as champagne from canalic tea. 'Grandmamma certainly in her old-fashioned days would never have recognized these filmy, etheralized creations. 'In the fashion department of the June Woman's Home Companion appears an article entitled 'Clothes for the Tiny Girl and Boy,' in the course of which the author writes, in part, as follows, about the changes in babies' clothes within the past fifty years: 'Times have changed since the days when the regular baby dress was the Mother Hubbard model, gathered straight widths on a square or round yoke. The styles for the little children of to-day change with each succeeding season with as much versatility as in the grown-ups. Back in the early sixties, babies wore clothes almost counterparts of their parents'. The infant's frock was cut panel front with insets of lace puffing or embroidery. The tiny shoulders, neck and arms were often left bare, the shoulder straps with small puff sleeves falling off the shoulders. Quantities of petticoats suggested the hoop skirts then in vogue. 'That the first consideration for the baby should be his comfort we all agree, so the simply made garments are the most desirable. The materials should be as fine as can be afforded.'

EVERYONE WORKS BUT FATHER

Two men, who had formerly lived in the same town, met after a number of years and entered into conversation. "Did all your boys turn out well, Jim?" asked one of them. "Yes, indeed they did." "What's Albert doing?" "He's tryin' to discover a new germ," replied the father. "And Bob?" "Oh, Bob is tryin' his hand at a newspaper an' bein' editor," was the old gentleman's reply. "And Charlie—what's he at?" "He's an actor. All the time talkin' about elevatin' the stage." "And what are you doing, Jim, now that all your boys are away?" asked the old friend. "Well," answered the old man, "I'm a-supportin' of Albert an' Bob an' Charlie."—In National Monthly.

AN ACCOMPLICE

"No," said a physician, "Dr. Henry is not a partner of mine. We often consult together, and attend to each other's business in case of absence, but we are in no sense partners." "I see," was the reply, "he is what you might call simply an accomplice."—In National Monthly.

A STOMACH TONIC

There is a form of indigestion called "atonic dyspepsia." Atonic means "lack of tone." It is probably the most common form of indigestion, but not much is heard about it because people are inclined to group all forms of dyspepsia as "stomach trouble" and the doctors let it go at that. Lack of tone in the digestive organs means that the stomach is no longer able to do its work as nature intended. The nerves that control it are weak, the glands that supply the digestive fluids are not working properly. Gas on the stomach, sour risings in the throat are constipation result. The cause of the trouble is thin blood. Stomach, nerves and glands are all dependent on the blood and when it gets thin and watery they are at once weakened. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act directly on the blood and the first response from the stomach is a better appetite, freedom from distress after eating and an increase in ambition and energy generally. Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a stomach tonic and see how your general health improves. A diet book, "What to Eat and How to Eat," will be sent free on request by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Every drugist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.—Advertisement.
