THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 21

WILSON'S WAR ON BUSINESS

THERE is to be no suspension of the war on business now under way at Washington. There may be "watchful waiting" regarding Mexico and the developments in that distracted country, but nothing will be permitted to interfere with the Wilson crusade against business and the sources of property in the United States.

The wonder is sometimes expressed whether some way cannot be devised of switching these matters around so as to inject some purpose and zeal into the foreign situation and some care and consideration into the domestic war on business; but no practical suggestion has as yet been advanced.

Yet, in spite of this constant hostility on the part of the administration toward the business interests of the country, the Palmer-McCormick group in Pennsylvania have the effrontery to appeal to Pennsylvania voters, thousands of whom are out of employment through the free-trade heresies of the Democracy, to support the White House selections for United States Senator and Governor in order to sustain President Wilson.

A GOOD LESSON STEELTON has taught Harrisburg many things in the past; doubtless the bustling mill town at our southern gate will teach us many things in the future.

For seven years the Municipal League and Civic Club of the borough fought to get the commission. Harrisburg civic bodies, too, have urged the appointment of a shade tree body here.

Those supporters of President Wilson who are still prating about national honor and national integrity in connection with the Panama canal tolls are bound to be impressed with the growing resentment of the people over the weakness of the administration in this matter.

THE official figures of the accidents in the anthracite mines of Pennsylvania, in the last annual report of the Department of Mines, just published, show a marked improvement over those of the previous year, but the report also carries a warning, according to the belief of the coal company officials.

she would add one more victory to her long list of diplomatic triumphs. As showing President Wilson's disposition to change front on important matters, he quoted the President's Washington Park speech, in which Mr. Wilson endorsed the free tolls policy, and also the two letters of 1907 and 1914 in which the President expressed diametrically opposite views of those of Secretary of State Bryan.

"Would that we could do something at once dignified and effective to knock Mr. Bryan once for all into a cocked hat," was the sentiment he quoted in the Wilson letter of 1907. In the letter of this year the President eulogized "Mr. Bryan's character, his justice, his sincerity, his transparent integrity and his Christian principle."

"Other instances without number," could be given, showing the facility with which the President is able to change front to what he considers the needs of the hour. It would be quite within precedents to call this a short time advocating free tolls quite as loudly as he now denounces them.

Gradually the pendulum is swinging in the right direction. Men of ability and courage and patriotism are tired of the insistence of little men that the President must be supported and that it is a sign of disloyalty when anybody disagrees with him.

This bill is misnamed. It should be entitled "A bill to exalt British commerce and to destroy American shipping," or "A bill to expand the glory of the British Empire and humiliate the United States."

Experts of the forest service state that the soils of the whole country, and particularly of the South, have lost and are losing immense amounts of this source of soil fertility through forest fires which apparently do little immediate damage, but rob the soil of accumulations of humus.

In many parts of the South land is being cleared for farming, and where such forest land has not been burned there is a large percentage of vegetable matter, which provides considerable fertility and a good texture.

Not only is this physical resemblance remarkable, it is pointed out, but each of the three began his career as a Liberal. Many points of similarity might be found in their careers and each stumbled along the same path toward the maelstrom of war.

Here the English comparison ends. But it might have gone a bit farther. It might have pointed out that the weakness of Pitt was his war with the French republic, which cost millions in treasure and thousands of lives.

And the question might be asked, will the comparison continue in the case of President Wilson, who even now seems to be hesitating at the entrance to the same road that led Pitt and Chamberlain to retirement?

James E. Roderick of the Department of Mines says that, as the mines of Pennsylvania are now equipped and managed, the liability of accident is reduced to a minimum, except in the matter of personal carelessness or negligence. No equipment, however perfect and complete it may be, can prevent accidents from these causes.

If the accidents resulting from carelessness and disobedience of rules could be eliminated, says Mr. Roderick, the fatalities in the mines would not be greater than in many vocations in the cities. He says also that the work of the coal miner becomes more dangerous as the operations grow more extensive and attain to greater depth.

The natural hazard tends to increase the number of accidents, care in mining is actually reducing them.

EVENING CHAT

State-wide primaries may be a success in determining the will of the voters of a party who have fulfilled the requirements preliminary to voting at the election to make nominations, but there is a very serious lack of means of furnishing the people with information as to results.

Report has it that there were 1,500 certified voters in the Democratic "watchers." Whether this is true or not we are not prepared to say—just now—but in view of the fact that the McCormick machine campaign is less than 5,000 there must have been more "watchers" than "waiters."

Another thing interesting about the McCormick machine campaign is the manner in which it has brought a lot of young Democrats to the front. The little boss is not as young as he used to be, but the young Democrats with him, probably due to the fact that the aforetime bosses clung to the old ways, would not give the young fellows a chance.

Among visitors to the city for the Odd Fellows convention is L. A. Lauderbaugh, treasurer of Crawford county and Democratic candidate for Congress in the Erie-Crawford district. He lives in Mendonville, where he has been a lawyer and where he is very well known as an active and progressive citizen.

The battle between the suffragists and anti-suffragists in this section will break out afresh now that the nominations for the Legislature have been made and there will be some vigorous buttonholing and some "mass meetings." The "anties" will start their series of meetings at Middletown Friday evening and then have one at Carlisle. The "pros" will tour by a couple of meetings here next month.

The Odd Fellows gathered here for the state convention of the order are having a good time in holding neighborhood meetings and county meetings. Last evening there were many of these fellow workers and then some fellows would pass among the throngs and call out to meet such-and-such a county to meet. Some of the meetings were informal, but none the less jolly.

Boys who are sent to buy soda water invariably ask for the paper cups which are used by some of the owners of fountain concessions to the sanitary spirit abominable land. The reason the boys do this is far to seek. The cups when emptied can be turned upside down and when jumped on make a boom like a cannon cracker.

Speaking of soda, it only takes a warm evening like last night to send business to the fountains in large lots. One fountain in the central section of the city had to put on extra clerks, while another restocked its ice cream three times.

WELL KNOWN PEOPLE

—J. Benjamin Dimmick has one of the finest farms in Lackawanna county and takes a great interest in playing golf. —William Plinn gets his recreation as an auditor General Stason makes it a business to visit his farms three times a week. He has a couple of fine ones near Erie.

—Senator Burrows will start off on a cruise along the Atlantic coast, soon as Congress adjourns. He will not go to the Rockies this year. —Ex-Governor Stuart presided at the founder's day exercises at Girard College yesterday. —Jesse L. Hartman, renominated for Congress in the Blair district, owns huge dolomite quarries.

NEWS DISPATCHES OF THE CIVIL WAR

[From the Telegraph, May 21, 1864.] Defeats Jim Jones Washington, May 20, 8 P. M. A dispatch states that Averill has destroyed the railroad near Christiansburg. He had a brilliant victory over the rebel General Jim Jones at Wytheville.

[From the New York Sun.] The career of William J. Bryan has been rich in contradictions and absurdities. His untrustworthiness as a counsellor and his incapacity as a debater, exposed among the incidents that have discredited his judgment and exhibited his incapacity, surely none is more extraordinary than his prospective closure of his incompetency which is involved in the history of the anama tolls plank of the Democratic platform of 1912.

"WATCHERS" IN MACHINE RECORD

Primary Campaign Has Developed Some Changes in Ways of Getting Results Here BUSINESS EFFICIENCY PLANS McCormick Wanted the Votes and His Organization Was One of the Best Ever Here

The coterie of bosses which wrested control of the Democratic state machine from the Old Guard three years ago and has kept it in two sharply contested state campaigns has introduced more real business methods into the affairs of the State Democracy than known since the days of Harrisburg and its city there have been some fine examples furnished of "business efficiency." Some of the methods are like those of old times, but they are under new names and are speeded up in spirit with modern ideas.

In old, bygone days it was the custom, so rumor says, for Democrats to "watch" but the "watchers" in spirit with modern ideas. In old, bygone days it was the custom, so rumor says, for Democrats to "watch" but the "watchers" in spirit with modern ideas.

POLITICAL SIDELIGHTS

—Expense account filing is next. —A policy of "watching" is a rather expensive thing. —Wonder who will be the next Democratic city chairman in Harrisburg? —Under the law every cent directly expended by a candidate or spent for him by committees must be accounted for. —The Pa-Mc League will now proceed to be heard from weekly. —Candidate Prizer will probably have food for thought for the next few days. —There does not seem to be very much doubt about Dr. Brumbaugh in the Lederger office. —The Pa-Mc League will now proceed to be heard from weekly. —Candidate Prizer will probably have food for thought for the next few days. —There does not seem to be very much doubt about Dr. Brumbaugh in the Lederger office.

AN INDIAN PIPE DREAM

[From the New York Sun.] Our World contains the most beautiful and instructive sentiments: "Permanent peace in Mexico is not to be secured by armies. It must be fortified by deeds. It is to be guaranteed by the liberation of the people, by their possession of their land, by enlightened government and by the unselfish assistance of the people of the United States."

A large order and a long contract. One of the most difficult campaigns of education. Divide the great estates and public lands into small lots. Wipe out the debts that keep the peons an illiterate and ignorant. But who is to liberate them from the habits of generations, to insure them possession of their land, to give them the natural as well as the Indian desire not to do any more work than they might be needed for? —The Pa-Mc League will now proceed to be heard from weekly. —Candidate Prizer will probably have food for thought for the next few days. —There does not seem to be very much doubt about Dr. Brumbaugh in the Lederger office.

VALUE OF BEAUTY TO TOWNS Many towns have increased their taxable property by the simple and expensive expedient of cleaning out the ugly buildings around the railroad station, and planting trees and shrubbery. This beauty has its distinct commercial value. A great wealth of flowers makes every house and building at higher prices. Other things being equal, residents will pay more money to live in a town where a consistent attempt is made toward beautifying the place. —New Castle Courier.
