

Women and Their Interests TUNIC SUGGESTIONS IN ONE PIECE SKIRT

If One Wishes a Combination of Materials Will Look Well

8256 One-Piece Skirt for Misses and Small Women, 16 and 18 Years. WITH HIGH OR NATURAL WAIST LINE.

Such a skirt as this one is perfectly adapted to washable material, consequently is sure to be in demand at this season. The tuck gives a tunic suggestion and the fullness gives breadth where breadth is needed, yet the skirt is made in one straight piece and consequently is easy to wash and iron.

For the 16-year size will be needed 3 3/4 yards of material 27 inches wide, 2 3/4 yards 36 or 44. The width of the skirt at the lower edge is 1 yard 20 inches.

The pattern 8256 is cut in sizes for misses 16 and 18 years of age. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents.

Their Married Life

By Mabel Herbert Urner

Helen raised herself on her elbow and looked at the clock. It was not quite seven.

The dull consciousness that Nora had gone and that she must awaken in time to get breakfast, had been with her through the night. She had not slept well, her head ached and she felt heavy and depressed.

The new girl was coming at nine, but the thought was not cheering. Helen dreaded the breaking in of a new maid. And she would never get any like Nora. Now that she was gone, Helen realized that she had had a real fondness for this warm-hearted, quick-tempered Irish girl.

With a sigh, she sat up in bed and brushed back her hair. As she groped for her slippers, there came a shrill ring of the phone.

Warren stirred, then opened his eyes. "What in thunder—" "It's the phone, dear. I'll answer it," slipping on her kimono.

"Hello!" anticipating a wrong number call. Helen's voice was sharp. "Hello!" more sharply, as there was no answer.

Then came a faint quavering, "Is that you, Missis Curtis?"

It was Nora. The familiar voice brought to Helen a curious thrill.

"This is Nora, ma'am. I—don't suppose you'd take me back?"

"Where are you now, Nora?" Helen tried to keep the eagerness out of her voice.

"I'm at a drug store, ma'am, right now." Nora's voice broke to a sob. "I—'d like to come back—if you'll take me."

With a sinking dismay Helen remembered that the new girl was coming at 9. What should she do? Nora was penniless—she wanted to come back—and Helen knew she wanted her. But the other girl!

"Nora, I don't know what to say, I've engaged another girl! Oh, why—why were you so foolish yesterday. I gave you every chance—"

The heartbroken sobbing came over the wire.

"Now listen, Nora; listen to me! I can't talk to you over the phone. You come here and I'll see what I can do."

"All right, ma'am," eagerly. "I'll come right away and get breakfast."

Helen ran back to the bedroom with an excited.

"Who do you think it was? Nora. She wants to come back!"

"This is an announcement with a non-committal grunt.

"Dear, what SHALL I do? The other girl's coming at nine. I can't disappoint her—and yet—oh, I'd much rather take back Nora."

"You're a fool if you do. She'll only go off on another tantrum."

"No, I think she's had her lesson. She was crying so she could hardly talk. She's probably spent a sleepless night waiting to phone me."

"How about breakfast?" Warren yawned and stretched his clenched fists. "Haven't you better get a move on?"

"She's coming to get breakfast—she was right near here when she phoned. That's her now," as the kitchen bell rang. "Dear, won't you let her in? I don't want to talk to her just yet."

Grumblingly Warren slipped on his bathrobe.

Superfluous Hair Killed Without Electricity

I have the greatest trouble with correspondents who insist on using common, worthless depilatories or want the torturing electrical current applied for killing their superfluous hair, says Mrs. Chamblade in Miady's Boudoir. "More mental and physical suffering is caused by these abominable methods than you can imagine. I have carefully investigated that never fails to remove all signs of hair completely and painlessly and without injury to the skin or complexion. In a surprisingly large number of cases it has destroyed all trace of hair so that it has never returned. I must not wish caution my readers that it must not be applied to hair that they do not wish totally destroyed. It is called 'Mrs. Osgood's Wonder,' being named for a well known woman who arranged for it to be put on the market after it had succeeded in entirely eradicating growth of hair on chin, lip and arms, which everything else had failed to do."

I've engaged another girl! Oh, why—why were you so foolish yesterday. I gave you every chance—" The heartbroken sobbing came over the wire. "Now listen, Nora; listen to me! I can't talk to you over the phone. You come here and I'll see what I can do."

"Good morning, Nora," she tried to say it in her usual tone. "Good morning, ma'am," said with lowered eyes, as she hurried out to answer the door bell. "Oh, I'm afraid that's the new girl now," murmured Helen.

"I don't know what to say, I've engaged another girl! Oh, why—why were you so foolish yesterday. I gave you every chance—" The heartbroken sobbing came over the wire. "Now listen, Nora; listen to me! I can't talk to you over the phone. You come here and I'll see what I can do."
