FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 5
PLATFORM MAKING
W HILE the several committees of the different political organizations in this State have been reaching into the clouds for alleged principles it has apparently not occurred to any of them to consider whether it might not be wise for some party to suggest a getting back to solid ground for the benefit of the people.

been the breaking down of all law and the destruction of order. It is just as important to the most humble citizen as to the multi-millionaire that every citizen shall be protected in life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Colonel Roosevelt was evidently somewhat annoyed when he wrote to Chairman Detrich, of the Washington party State committee, that he would come into Pennsylvania and "take all the part I can in the campaign."

A THEORETICAL PRESIDENT
RESIDENT WILSON and his apologists are now trying to excuse themselves for the constant battering of the business of the country by the Administration with the general statement that legitimate business has nothing to fear; that the only purpose of the Administration is to drive out crooked business.

One appeal after another has been made to stop the trade on business at Washington without avail. Only last week the President again gave a representative body of manufacturers to understand that his legislative program would go on; that he realized there was a business depression, but that better times are ahead.

Tariff receipts are falling off by the millions, but while the mills and factories of the United States are closing we must not forget that the New Freedom in distributing prosperity beyond the seas at the expense of the American manufacturer and the American workman.

EVENING CHAT

"What a great leveler the dining room is," remarked a man who has been observing the passing show for many years in and about the state's capital city. He said: "Buildings and its hotels, highways and byways."

Gifford Pinchot's determination to make the campaign last for now until November, or, as he put it yesterday, "from when it started until it ends," is not taken kindly by some of the men on the other side.

"There's General Carranza," said a man as he walked across Market Square yesterday afternoon. And sure enough, there was the keen face, the peculiar whiskers, the eyeglasses and the other characteristics of the man because of pictures of the Mexican "first chief."

Among visitors to the city yesterday was Ezra Stouss, of Gap, Pa., who has been taking an interest in the politics of the state for years. He is a farmer of Lancaster county's richest and one of the best of the sect which wears distinctive garb.

State officials have been getting after "cure" men in the orchard and in the barnyard and some tall "showing" has been going on lately. For instance, a man named Jones, of some of the tree doctors are frauds and recently displayed to the public the chicanery of a man who said that his "cure" had been inserted in a tree with a drill having a three-inch hole.

William Flinn took a walk about the city yesterday after the Washington state committee had adjourned and looked the city over. Flinn likes Harrisburg and takes a big interest in it, having once had an idea of putting up a big hotel here. Yesterday he asked how the city was getting on and was informed that it was coming along and was informed that it was nothing doing yet.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR
NEEDED REST TIME
To the Editor of the Telegraph:
This June month is the season that the school "kiddos" enjoy most. Parents feel sincerely grateful to George W. Kennedy, the school director who instituted the custom of a session the last month of each school year.

POLITICAL SIDELIGHTS
—Money still talks in politics.
—Wouldn't you some of the Democrats like being valued at 10 cents.
—It will not be many years until people will be wondering why they bothered with such primary laws.

AN EVENING THOUGHT
The good of many ways depends on the courage and fidelity of the few.—Lowell.

The Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, in its account of the meetings of the Republicans and Democrats, has this to say about platforms: "The Democratic machine will have a hard time defining its method of platform making."

One of the funniest things in connection with the meetings of the Democratic and Washington party State committee is the other thing that has been mentioned, that of stealing its thunder.

COLONEL GRIER PROTESTS

HIGH COST OF NOMINATIONS
[From the Philadelphia Bulletin.]
The $32,000 which Vance C. McCormick spent in his campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor, is entirely too much for any candidate to expend, even though he may be a man of wealth, and even though the money may be used for expenses authorized by law.
