BETTER AN EYE OUT

Than always aching. In the days when proverbs were coined this wisdom may have applied, but in this age of modern science and accurate optical equipment, there is no need to have one hour's discomfort through imperfect eyesight or ill-fitting glasses. "PEOPLE TOO PROUD" SAYS MURDERER before he began his march to the scaffold. And in the same frayed trousers, old gray, collarless shirt and broken shoes he had worn in prison for the last several months the murderer of William Henry Slater was hanged in the jail yard. To-day's execution may be the last by that method to be carried out in Dauphin county; certainly it was the last hanging of a negro. For the first time in the history of Dauphin county the entire jury of twelve men were negroes, and negro physicians stood beneath the trap with stethoscopes and listened for the final beat of Hall's heart. On the Death Trap Until the last moment, perhaps, Hall had been perfectly tractable, but obstinate so far as the usual preparations for his death were concerned. To prison guards, to deputies and to his spiritual adviser he had protested that he should not be hanged because he didn't mean to kill Slater. So, up until the moment he stood upon the death trap Hall maintained an apparent indifference to the exhortations of the minister. But as the sheriff and his deputies were adjusting the arm and ankle straps and the noose bare-headed jurors and other witnesses beneath the gallows saw Hall's lips moving, as if in prayer. At 10.09 the sheriff stepped to the side of the gallows and kicked the pin that released the otherwise perfectly secure floor of the scaffold. Just twelve minutes later Drs. C. H. Crampton, A. Leslie Marshall and C. L. Carter nodded to the sheriff and his deputies. The tightened rope had to be cut from Hall's throat. The physicians said he had strangled to death. Didn't Want To Go During the last several months Hall seemed cheerful enough and only grew really serious when his execution was talked of. Then he insisted that he "didn't want to go to the yard." Although able to read and write, Hall was superstitious and stoutly contended that regardless of what became of his body on the scaffold he "was a-comin' back to haunt" those who had had "anything to do with his hangin'." Since last Saturday he had refused to clasp anyone's hand and even refused to shake hands at parting with his spiritual adviser, the Rev. Milford Ball, pastor of the Zion Baptist Church. Nor would the condemned pray or sing with the minister. He was on his knees a bit this morning, but didn't seem to be concerned with the question of conversion. He didn't want to go to the jail yard, he said, and added firmly "that they wouldn't get him out in the yard unless they carried him." The board with which weak-kneed prisoners are strapped when it is necessary to carry them out was brought to Hall's cell. Then he decided to walk. Sings "Casey Jones" While Hall refused to join in the singing of the hymns in his cell he startled a sleeping jail early this morning by softly singing "Casey Jones." Contrary to the usual custom, the whole jail was so quiet that the proverbial dropping of a pin this morning would have made a noise. Sitting within their cells the more than 200 prisoners quietly waited until Hall made his journey to the jail yard. When the sudden clatter of the falling trap sounded through the lower corridors some of the prisoners whispered prayers. On other occasions, when condemned men requested it, the cells and corridors echoed with the voices of the prisoners singing hymns. Hall was awake before daylight this morning and talked quite a while with Underkeeper Reigle. He said he is surely "comin' back." Whether or not Hall's mother in far-away North Carolina is notified of his death didn't, apparently, concern the negro. Among those who saw the execution to-day was Sheriff H. E. Wilson, of Huntingdon county, who was the guest of Sheriff H. C. Wells. The negro jurors were Alonzo Harris, A. H. Duffan, William Green, Russel Robinson, Robert Waters, David Harrod, Harry Burrs, John P. Scott, James Robinson, Robert Hall, Isalah Parsons and Edward Murphy. In addition to the colored physicians Dr. W. T. James, the prison physician, helped officiate beneath the gallows. The scaffold had been erected just outside the eastern jail yard door and this was screened from the view of possible roof sightseers by a great canvas canopy. Outside the jail hundreds of people waited from 10 o'clock until after the covered body was taken to Undertaker S. S. Speece's automobile.
