ward along Lafayette street, where scores of the city's finest residences were burned. The fire spread out to another manufacturing center on the shore of the harbor and destroyed large factories. In the intervening area scores of business houses were swept away. The Salem hospital was among the buildings burned, but all the patients were safely removed.

Other Cities Assisted

Great quantities of apparatus from neighboring cities assisted in fighting the flames and finally succeeded in checking their passage southward. To the eastward they burned themselves out at the water's edge. The final stand was made near the Boston and Maine railroad station. Here several buildings were dynamited and the firemen at last gained the upper hand, saving the northeastern part of the city.

A separate fire, which the police say was of incendiary origin, destroyed thirteen dwellings in North Salem and threatened the plant of the Salem Oil Company.

THINK HANGING CAUSED BIG STORM

Lancaster County Farmers Declare Execution of Hall Brought Thunder and Lightning

Belief that Wednesday night's thunderstorm, which with its high wind and sharp bolts of lightning did considerable damage to crops in the lower end of this and in Lancaster county, was a direct result of the hanging of Pascal Hall, was expressed by several farmers yesterday.

Paul Schmiedel, a tobacco salesman of 1536 Derry street, who was down through Lancaster county yesterday, says that half a dozen farmers whom he talked to spoke of the storm and said it had followed because of the hanging. It seemed to be a well-founded superstition throughout this section of the country that a severe electrical storm invariably comes within twelve hours after a man mounts the gallows.

The superstition to this effect is not

THOUSAND BUILDINGS IN SALEM DESTROYED

Started at 2 O'clock

From 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon when a terrific explosion occurred in the factory of the Korn Leather Company, at Proctor and Boston streets, the flames raged practically unchecked until midnight. The explosion is thought to have occurred among highly inflammable chemicals used in the manufacture of patent leather. This factory stood near the foot of Galloves Hill, famous as the hanging place of witches in early Colonial days, at the western end of the city. A high wind carried the flames through the manufacturing district and thence southeastward to the heart of the city and across the thickly populated tenement district to the water front. A shift in the wind sent the fire north-

Army and Red Cross to Help Stricken Salem

By Associated Press

Washington, D. C., June 26.—Ernest P. Bicknell, national director of the Red Cross, left to-day for Salem to direct relief work. The Red Cross has sent $5,000 and is prepared to raise a large fund if necessary. Mabel T. Boardman, chairman of the National Relief Board of the Red Cross, will also go to Salem.

Mr. Bicknell also requested the Associated Charities of Boston, an institutional member of the Red Cross, to offer its services to the stricken city in organizing and directing relief measures. This telegraph was sent to Governor Walsh and the Mayor of Salem.

"American Red Cross offers its services and will gladly render any possible assistance. Associated Charities of Boston, representing the Red Cross, have been asked to place experienced people at your command. Massachusetts Red Cross boards, of which Governor Walsh is president, and Gardner M. Lane, treasurer, have authority to open relief fund if needed. Please communicate with Mr. Lane." Secretary Garrison, after a conference with Representative Gardner, of Massachusetts, called upon Colonel H. L. Hawthorne, at Fort Warren, in Boston harbor, to forward a complete report of conditions in Salem. Mr. Garrison said the army would co-operate in the relief work if the Massachusetts authorities found their resources inadequate.

"SPLENDID" CROPS IN THIS COUNTRY

"Splendid" The rains of the past few days have been a wonderful help. Vegetation can fairly be seen growing the past few days since it has had new moisture. Corn is well on the way to a big crop. Wheat, though quite seriously infested with the Hessian fly, is still comparatively better than last year.

In some of the shale soil sections of northern Lancaster and southern Dauphin counties, corn has secured a good start and a big crop is looked for. In places where the crop is not well advanced the drawback is due entirely to the wire worm. Many farmers have had trouble to replant their crop three to four times and it is not yet started. A good bit of land is going into potatoes this year. There are farmers who have as high as twenty-five acres. There were more seed potatoes bought from Maine than ever before, it is said.

Wheat Will Be Good

The wheat crop will be good, but the danger from the Hessian fly in the southern section and the northern part of Lancaster county is quite serious. The clover crop is rather short on account of the drought. In some places where the rock formation runs to within a few inches of the surface the clover was scorched and burned out. Timothy is in a very good condition and the rains have helped its growth to a great extent.

The particular advantages of cabbage as a paying crop have been studied lately by Dauphin county farmers, and as a result the acreage is larger than before. The early cabbage is heading up nicely. In fact, several farmers were selling their first heads as early as last week.

Without an exception the fruit crops will be larger than last year—and better. Every year there are more sprayed and carefully-treated orchards and the output is consequently improved in quality, if not in quantity. Peaches will be plentiful.
