TO BE INSTALLED

chine and as soon as it has determined the best and most perfect machine a purchase will be made.

Expects Criticism

"I presume," Mr. Hart continued, "that we will get criticism a-plenty, for such is ever the case when a church leaves the beaten path, but I am certain an honest examination of the subject will lead all fair-minded people to approve our course. Two important considerations have determined our action. First, the problem of the Sunday evening congregation, and second, a knowledge of the almost universal love for pictures. As to the first it is only necessary to say that the Sunday evening congregation is the nightmare of every preacher's life. The people just will not go to church on Sunday evening. Every conceivable method has been tried, with varying results. Some of the best preachers that ever graced the earth are preaching to Sunday evening congregations varying in size from 100 to 25. What a waste of resources! No where else is such a thing permitted. Say what we will, the Sunday evening service is one of the perplexing problems of our day and much to be reckoned with.

"For several weeks I have been experimenting with illustrating the salient features of our Sunday evening sermon with stereopticon views and the results have been surprising. The same is true with the Wednesday evening prayer service. Next Sunday evening we will use the stereopticon to illustrate our Fourth of July discourse, on 'Twenty-nine Leading Events in American History' and while it always is hazardous to assume the role of a prophet, it is a safe prediction that the congregation will be one-half larger than usual. Now if nothing more were accomplished than to increase the size of the congregation, the results would not be worth the effort. But if the preacher is to accomplish that whereunto he is called, the first of all get the people to whom he expects to minister there.

Just a Step Further

"There is nothing new about this plan. Preachers and teachers for a generation have been using the stereopticon. We propose now to go a step further and use the moving picture. And why not? Everybody likes pictures. They are used everywhere. Formerly the good Book itself was illustrated with crude drawings. Likely the first impression made on the mind of the infant was by the picture. The stately and impressive service of the liturgical churches is largely a beautiful panorama of moving human pictures. In the kindergarten and primary departments of the Sunday school the first lessons are imparted by the little picture-card, larger hanging pictures and other forms of illustration. Why should we seek to cultivate this love of the beautiful in the mind of the child up to a certain point and then later frown upon the very method we have taught the child to love?"

"If it be argued that so much evil has been taught by the moving picture, our reply is that the same argument could be used against every musical instrument in use in our churches, and by that kind of logic every good thing in the universe could be argued out of existence.

Religion in the Laugh

"For the present our moving picture machine will be installed in the assembly room, where every Saturday evening the children and youth will be entertained with pictures descriptive of religious, moral and educational subjects, and always with one film of good, wholesome fun; for we are of the opinion that there is as much religion in a laugh as in a cry.

"For the good we may do it is our hope to make all these entertainments free to the children and only a penny or two admission for adults. Thus the very best pictures from the most up-to-date equipment will be brought within the reach of everybody.

"Certain it is that we will be criticized and perhaps condemned. More than likely we will be charged with sinister and selfish motives. But all these things were considered before we decided definitely our course. We had the same things to endure when, some months since, we announced that we would read one of Billy Sunday's sermons to an evening congregation. We are willing to endure them again if the results are half so lasting and apparent as from the Sunday sermon. More and more are we coming to feel with the great Apostle, 'I am willing to be all things to all men that I might save some.'"
