For Agonizing Corns You Can't Beat It

Certainly not, "Putnam's" has 'em all beat a mile. It's a marvel on corns and foot lumps, acts like magic. Why for nearly fifty years Putnam's Extractor has been the standard remedy, the dependable one, the sure kind that never disappoints.

It's painless too. Think of it! Paint it on to-night, in the morning the pain is all gone.

Small wonder the sale of Putnam's Corn Extractor is so large, 25c, at dealers everywhere and at C. M. Forney's.—Advertisement.

GEN. J. P. TAYLOR DIES AT REEDSVILLE

Well-Known Union Officer Had Burial Casket Made From Captured Rebel Cannon

GENERAL JOHN P. TAYLOR

Special to The Telegraph
Lewistown, Pa., June 29.—General J. P. Taylor, of Reedsville, died suddenly late last night. He was 87 years old.

General Taylor took part in the transfer of the battle-torn flags in Harrisburg two weeks ago, and is believed to have over-exerted himself. He had not been well since. In the parade on that day he became weak, and had to be given assistance.

Last Thursday night he was standing in an overhanging porch, which was shattered by lightning during an electrical storm, and was slightly stunned.

In March last General Taylor ordered his burial casket made by a Philadelphia firm to be cast from a captured rebel cannon. The casket was on exhibition for a time in Philadelphia and was then stored in the undertaking rooms of J. H. Fretz.

John P. Taylor was born on the estate where he resided, June 6, 1827. His parents educated him for a farmer, but just at this period the war broke out and young Taylor felt that his services were needed by his country.

Taylor enlisted in the United States army as first lieutenant in Company C, First Pennsylvania Cavalry, and before his company reached the front he was made captain. In September, 1862, he was promoted to lieutenant-colonel, and in June, 1863, was made a full-fledged colonel.

In August, 1864, he was made brigadier-general for the service he had rendered to his country. General Taylor took part in twenty-seven of the hardest fought battles of the war and was commended for his bravery.

Fats Make the Hottest Fire

And as the digestion of food generates body heat, so the more greasy, heavy food you eat, the hotter you are.

One can feel several degrees cooler and more comfortable in summer by selecting proper food.

Grape-Nuts

is made of carefully selected wheat and barley and contains all their nutritive values, including the mineral phosphates, (grown in the grain), that are especially necessary for rebuilding the tissue cells of body and brain.

Grape-Nuts is thoroughly baked (16 to 24 hours) which breaks down the starch cells. Therefore it is easily and quickly digested—generally in about one hour.

If you care to feel cool and fit make Grape-Nuts a part of the summer diet—a delicious part!
