RAILROAD TRAVEL WILL BE VERY HEAVY

Rush From the City on P. R. R. and Reading Started Yesterday Afternoon

According to reports at the local railroad stations to-day, a big portion of Harrisburg's population will spend July 4 out of the city. The exodus started yesterday afternoon. Trains on the Pennsylvania lines and the Reading railroad were crowded with holiday visitors.

No special excursions will be run to-morrow, except the usual July 4 trains to Gettysburg. Because of the annual rush, railroad companies a long time ago decided to cut all special excursions for July 4. Both the Pennsylvania and Reading companies offer the usual reductions to the seashore and other summer resorts. Many Harrisburgers will take advantage of this. The sale of tickets from Harrisburg to Atlantic City and other resorts yesterday on both the Reading and Pennsylvania lines was large. It is expected the sales to-day will reach nearly 500 on both roads.

TWO LITTLE STORM DEMONSTRATIONS ON

County Commissioners' Office Air Surcharged Pretty Heavily For Awhile

Two little storm demonstrations occupied the attention of the Dauphin county commissioners for an hour or so this morning.

One was an echo of Wednesday's tiff between Commissioners Isaac Hoffman and S. S. Miller and Commissioner John H. Eby upon the question of paying J. Meetch Stroup for working on county duplicates. The air was pretty heavily charged for awhile but the flashes were purely verbal. The other wasn't a storm electrically but a real vivid demonstration of lightning and its effect on buildings with and without lightning rods. The first question got before the commissioners when the warrant for Stroup was before them. It was to have been paid Wednesday, but County Controller Gough and Commissioner Eby withheld their countersignatures, Eby raising the question of the young man's appointment. At today's session Major E. O. Ott, the county solicitor, advised the county controller to countersign the warrant as he contended it was perfectly proper and legal. Eby again questioned whether Stroup had been regularly appointed and whether the minutes showed that this had been done by resolution or similar action. Commissioners Hoffman and Miller then pointed out routine work of this character is merely included in the minutes and Mr. Miller pointedly declared that the whole question was based entirely on the fact that J. Meetch Stroup had been selected.

Question of the Man

"Now, Mr. Eby, you know," said Mr. Miller, "that this whole question isn't raised by you over the question of the work—it's because of the man selected."
"You agreed among yourselves on this man's selection?" There was no action of the board of commissioners," inquired Mr. Eby.
"Oh, yes," said President Hoffman, "we admit that the question perhaps wasn't acted upon definitely by vote of the board. Such things rarely do come up by so formal a method as a resolution. That method isn't customary. There is nothing on the minutes either directing you to hire the man you did to compute the primary returns either. Mr. Eby, or some of the little printing matter you took along up to Lykens to have done," pointedly remarked Mr. Miller.
"But there was no action by the board on this appointment, just an agreement among yourselves" insisted Mr. Eby.

"The action was taken by a majority vote of the board," smilingly retorted President Hoffman, "and the majority rules, Mr. Eby."
"Nobody appreciates that better than I," laughed Mr. Eby.
So the air was cleared.

Lightning Rod Test

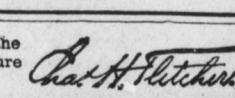

The other electrical demonstration was handled by J. H. Heckman, a representative of the firm of Dodd and Struthers, Des Moines, Iowa. The firm wants to equip the courthouses with a new system of lightning rods at a price that will approximate $500. The demonstration consisted of a series of tests by generated electricity of the relative effects on buildings properly and improperly wired. The lightning flashes were real—and so were the resultant cracks. Some toy houses and lead figures of men and animals were used to show how the crash of lightning can be carried. And as he experimented Mr. Heckman probably delivered the best little lecture on electricity and the methods of operation of lightning and lightning rods that the interested commissioners had heard in many and many a day.

They were on a low catafalque, approached by two steps, and surrounded by tall candlesticks in which enormous wax candles burned. More candles burned in silver grandoles placed at each corner. In front of the coffin reposed two wreaths of small white roses on a background of palms and large white roses with red and white streamers and bearing the simple inscription, "Sofie, Max, Ernst." Flowers were from the archduke's children. Other floral offerings, numbering several hundred, were placed in apartments adjoining the chapel. Masses were said at all the altars of the chapel from 8 o'clock in the morning until noon. At 10 o'clock the court choir entered and sang the "Miserere." From noon until 1 o'clock the bells of one of the city churches tolled.

Steel Iron Shoots His Wife; MAKES A GETAWAY

Gun-Play Occurs Just Across Street From Spot Where Hall Killed Slater

Until late this afternoon the police of Steelton have not succeeded in apprehending Henry Simms, who last evening fired three shots from a 38-caliber revolver at his wife, Ruth, who is now lying near death in the Harrisburg Hospital with a bullet wound in her body.
Simms and his wife, according to the story of the affair told by Mrs. Mary Simms, his sister-in-law, quarreled over another woman last Saturday. Following the quarrel they separated and Simms forbade his wife to call on his sister-in-law.
Yesterday his wife went to the home of the sister-in-law at 126 Adams street. When she started for her home across the street at 129 Adams street, Simms met her.
"You've gone your last," he exclaimed, according to the police. Then he whipped out the revolver and fired three shots. His wife screamed and fell to the pavement. A bullet had hit her in the back and passed nearly through her body.
Simms dashed down Adams street to Second and then up Pine. He was closely followed by Frank Pine, a brother of the wounded woman, Detective Joseph Gore, Officer Clinton Jones and High Constable A. P. Bomgardner, who were in the Union Republican Club rooms nearby when they heard the shots. Simms outdistanced his pursuers and escaped.
Last night's shooting occurred just across the street from the spot where Pascal Hall, who paid the penalty for his deed last week, fired the shot at Henry Slater which caused his death.
