Erie, Pa., July 3.—Members of the State Bar Association of Pennsylvania gathered at the largest banquet of the organization held in years cheered a speech by Governor John K. Tener upon what the Keystone State is doing to protect the well being of its 8,000,000 people. The speech was a departure from the usual speeches at such affairs and every word was heard with the closest attention.

The governor brought right to men who are most concerned with legislation what was being done by the government and pointed out what was needed. One of the significant parts of his speech was when he declared that after the State Highway department had built up a fine organization it was prevented from carrying out its work by the hold-up of the funds by the State Treasurer and Auditor General.

of Pennsylvania is virtually an organized army of 11,000 officers and enlisted men, thoroughly organized and fully equipped. It is a training school in which both officers and men are taught obedience to authority, respect for the flag, loyalty to our institutions and a proper conception of the duties of citizenship. The readiness to serve his country in her hour of need brings a man closer to and gives him a greater respect for the things for which the republic stands pre-eminent. The National Guard of our State has for years been considered by competent military authority to be the best trained and the most dependable force of citizen seldiery in the United States.

"In the war with Spain it was mobilized and placed in camp at Mount Gretna in thirty-six hours, all departments in working order. This required a high degree of perfection in organization and method—a knowledge of what to do and how to do it. This work is all under the control and direction of the adjutant general's department, a department that must issue the stores, provide for transportation, have camp equipage at the point of mobilization when the troops arrive—in short, place every department in working order. In the busy, hustling life of the American people too few give any thought to the importance of the military institution of the State.

The State Police

The Department of State Police was created by an act of the Legislature of 1995 and the State police force was organized, uniformed, equipped and ready for duty January 1, 1996. The force consists of 8 officers and 220 men, all mounted, and is divided into four troops with 2 officers and 55 enils, do rien in each. The creditable record this splendid force is well known to the majority of our citizens. During the year-1913 the Department of State Police received 4,156 requests for assistance, over 11 per day for every day in the year, and these requests came from judges, sheriffs, mayors, chiefs of police and private citizens. Unfortunately, the number of men of the force is so limited the department was only able to comply with about one-fifth or these requests. The force is always on duty, trained to the service and to the minute—flexible in its movements, and in its character and personnel personifies the cool judgment and bravery of the greatest police force that we have to-day.

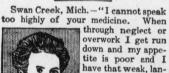

"Another department only recently organized is that of the State Fire Marshal. The territory covered by this department includes all the counties of the State save Allegheny and Philadelphia. To it all fires are reported, and by it investigations are made where incendiary origin is suspected. Many arrests have been made and convictions secured, and the effect of the prompt efforts of this department in making investigations and arrests has resulted in a noticeable decrease in the number of incendiary fires."
