FRIDAY EVENING

Play Games and Receive Souvenirs Appropriate to the National Holiday

Florence Wallace Hamilton and Hugh Hamilton, Jr., children of Mr. and Mrs. A. Boyd Hamilton, entertained a number of their little friends at their home, Derry street and Rutherford lane, to-day at a Fourth of July party. The decorations were red, white and blue in the dining room and the souvenirs were appropriate to the national holiday. The children hunted for make-believe firecrakers and when each one found eight they received a prize. After lunch the young folks went to a garden patch and at the end of each head of large paper lettuce was found a souvenir. Games were played and the youngsters cheered for the Fourth of July.

centennial celebration several years centennial celebration several years ago.

Of course one of the big events of the day will be the parade—and it won't be any ordinary sort of a parade. For instance, in one division alone there will be nearly 500 silk-hatted marchers. Everyone, mind, wears a silk hat.

The parade will form at Union and Ann streets at 8:30. Led by Chief Marshal Samuel Caley, Jr., it will move at 9 o'clock over the following route: Ann to Grant, countermarch to Union, to Water, to Vine, to Main, to Spring, to Water, to Catherine, to Pike, to Union, to bridge, to Royalton, to Water, to Juniata, to Allan, to Burd, to Northumberland, to Penn, to Wyoming to Dock, back to Middletown, to Wilson street, to Market and dismiss.

The Darktown fire brigade will make a wild dash for the scene. Most of the spectators will follow. When the firemen arrive the house will be doomed. From out one of the upper story windows there will appear a head. Then another. There will be a gasp from the crowd, as it is seen that the entire Darktown family is trapped by the blaze. But cheer up, it will all be part of the show.

"THE SHOWGIRL'S GLOVE"

"The Showgirl's Glove," the second feature of the Kalem "Alice Joyce Series," will be the headline attraction at the Photoplay to-morrow. In this absorbing drama Miss Joyce portrays the role of a wife who runs down the perpetrator of a crime for which her nusband faces the gallows. According to the story, Dick Hampton breaks his engagement with Stella Desmond, a showgirl, when he make some discoveries concerning her past. Pretending she is about to commit suicide, the girl raises knife. Dick slezes her hand and in the struggle is accidentally killed. Stella contrives to have suspicion fall upon John, the murdered boy's brother, whom she hates. John is arrested. Mrs. Hampton visits the scene of the crime and finds a woman's glove. A girl whom she has befriended sees the glove and informs Mrs. Hampton that her father, a ragpicker, had brought home a similar glove. Mrs. Hampton is led to suspect Stella and manages to secure a position as the showgirl's maid. While thus employed she arranges a denouement which wrings a confession from the murderess. The manner in which this is done will hold spectators wide-
