"Here are some books I brought home from the office, and three or four of yesterday's papers; we ought to find something to suit us," and Warren flung some magazines on the table. "Dear, how thoughtful of you to bring them home. Oh, there are some splendid places in this one; listen to this: "Idle Villa, in the heart of the Catskills, accommodates 100 guests; bathing in Whip-poor-will Lake, tramping, trout fishing, boating free to guests; references required. "I wonder why they want references, and Helen wrinkled up her forehead: "That seems so unnecessary for a summer hotel." "We'll pass that place up; sounds too good to be true, anyway. How about dinner, we can do this just as well afterward, and I'm about starved." "All right, I'll go out and see if Nora has everything ready. We're going to have spaghetti to-night fixed the way you like it, and this is the first time that Nora has ever cooked it that way." "Thought maybe you might have baked tomatoes," grumbled Warren, following Helen out into the dining-room. Helen always hated to have Warren come out before Nora was ready. Nora was capable, but it flustered her to have to hurry, and Helen had planned the dinner with several dishes that Warren particularly cared for; it was disappointing to have him speak of something else. "We'll have the tomatoes to-morrow, dear; it's Nora's day out, but I know just how to fix them. Everything is ready now, and I'm sure the spaghetti will be good." Nora placed the soup on the table, and Helen and Warren sat down. "Why not have salads and cooling things, now that the weather is getting so warm," said Warren, as he scalded his tongue with the hot soup. "Why, dear, I'd be only too glad to have a light meal in the evening; you have always insisted on having a regular dinner, so I hadn't thought about changing."

"Did he have a cellmate?" "He did." "I'd like to talk with him." In a few minutes the great bulk of Bill Hawkins showed in the door of the office. Kearney had taken a chair with his back to a window filled with sunlight. The old convict saw him, but could not make out his features because of the glare in his eyes. He sensed the human bloodhound in him, however. He recognized the big feet and droopy form of the plain clothes man and was fully acquainted with the old trick of sitting with the back to the light. Bill nodded to the warden. "Hello, Bill," was Kearney's greeting. The detective had recognized him as an old offender. Bill turned to him and walked so that the light would not be directly in his eyes. From a better position he studied the detective's face a moment. "The detective here would like to ask you some questions," said the warden. "How much more time you got to serve, Bill?" asked Kearney. "Ten years and then some," was the answer. "Marks against you?" The old burglar hesitated. "He ain't got no stripes on his arm, warden," said Kearney. "Would you mind finding out what the prison charges were against him?" The deputy warden furnished the record. It showed that on his own confession he had been found guilty of planning to escape and had suffered the addition of more than two years' extra time to his sentence. A suit of clothes had been found in his cell, the report of the conviction related. "You got the suit still, warden?" asked Kearney. "Yes." The deputy was sent for it. "Try on the coat, Bill," ordered Kearney when the clothes were brought him. Bill, a smothered volcano of anathemas, did as he was instructed. The sleeves of the coat reached barely beyond the elbows of his gorilla-like arms, and so tight was it that buttons and buttonholes were a good six inches apart. "You didn't expect to escape in that?" asked Kearney. The convict ignored the question. "You made it for your cell mate who did escape," the detective said sharply. "What are you kicking about?" demanded Bill, his sunken eyes flashing hate as he spoke. "Ain't I taking the extra time?" "But you don't have to, Bill," coaxed Kearney. "You can get that time taken off and then some of the original sentence, too, if you will help us out." The bribe was offered. Bill sneered and looked to the warden as if in supplication that Kearney be kicked from the room. The warden had no sympathy with the class of work his detective visitor was indulging in. He made a motion with his hand to the convict, a sign to him to control himself. "Nothing doing," said the old burglar to Kearney. "You've served a good part of your sentence," suggested Kearney. "Now, suppose I get a pardon or a parole through for you, will you help?" "I don't know nothing," Bill choked out. Kearney sat quietly for a moment as if deciding on the size and quality of his next bribe offering. "Bill," began Kearney slowly. "I saw your old girl one night last week—Rosie." The heavy jaw of Hawkins dropped.

KNIFE PLAITING ON EDGE OF OVERSKIRT

Another Style of Drapery Recently Come Into Great Favor

8225 Draped Skirt, 24 to 32 waist. WITH HIGH OR NATURAL WAIST LINE.

This long draped tunic makes one of the latest developments of the over-skirt idea. It is exceedingly graceful and attractive as well as in the height of style and, since tunics are made both to match the under skirt and in contrasting material, it becomes exceedingly practical. As shown here, the entire skirt is of taffeta with a frill of the same. How easy it would be to use the draped tunic over any foundation and such a long tunic as this one means practically a new skirt, for it is certain to cover all evidence of wear. Figured, striped and checked materials are likewise available. The underlying skin which forms the new complexion is so fresh and youthful-looking, you'll marvel at the transformation. It's the only thing known to actually discard an aged, faded, muddy or blotchy complexion. One ounce of mercolized wax is sufficient in most cases. If sun and wind make you squint and frown, you're bound to cultivate wrinkles and crow's feet. To overcome these quickly, bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel.

Miss Fairfax Answers Queries

THE WEDDING BREAKFAST DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: Will you kindly give me the menu for a simple breakfast for a June wedding? M. B. For a June wedding breakfast I would suggest this menu: 1. Strawberries or cantaloupe. 2. Planked haddock with boiled new potatoes and parsley or salmon, with peas and new carrots. 3. Broiled chicken or squabs with romaine and water cream or pineapple salad. 4. Waffles and maple syrup. Serve coffee and rolls with the second course. If you wish to make an appearance of the first three courses will be quite sufficient, or for your fourth course use any light luncheon dessert.

TOO YOUNG

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am fifteen years of age, but very tall. With my dress and manner I make an appearance of seventeen or more. I know a number of nice fellows who have asked me several times to go out with them. Now, do you think I should accept? PERPLEXED. You are still too young to go about with young men in the evenings. But if a boy friend asks you to accompany him to some perfectly proper place of amusement for an afternoon's outing, it would be quite proper for you to accept, provided, of course, your parents approve.

To Overcome Sunburn, Tan, Freckles, Wrinkles

If your skin is unduly reddened, freckled or tanned, dab a liberal amount of mercolized wax on the face and allow it to remain over night. When you wash off the wax in the morning, fine flaky, almost invisible particles of cuticle come with it. Re-tuning this daily, the entire outer skin is absorbed, but so gradually there's not the slightest hurt or inconvenience. Even the stubborn freckles are affected. The underlying skin which forms the new complexion is so fresh and youthful-looking, you'll marvel at the transformation. It's the only thing known to actually discard an aged, faded, muddy or blotchy complexion. One ounce of mercolized wax is sufficient in most cases. If sun and wind make you squint and frown, you're bound to cultivate wrinkles and crow's feet. To overcome these quickly, bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel.

Is Next Winter's Coal in the Bin?

This question should interest you especially if you are going away on your vacation or closing the house for the summer. If you postpone the matter till your return you can't take advantage of the still cheaper coal rates, which are 20c less a ton in Broken, Egg, Stove and Nut and will continue until September 1 when full winter prices are resumed.

Blood Purified Quickly in Summer

All the Body Responds to Action of Famous Remedy Just as thunder shakes the ground and stirs it into action, and lightning clears the air, burns up impurities, so does S. S. S. arouse action in the blood. It is cleansed, purified and impurities are converted into substance easily and quickly eliminated. In the winter time we get our natural purifying agency in fresh, cold, frosty air but most people spoil the effect by habits of living. And so we rely upon summer with the help of S. S. S. for it is now that the liver, lungs, kidneys and skin will be more active without the danger of severe colds. All such troubles as pimples, boils, rash, blood risings, eczema, acne and other forms of impure blood will be rushed out of the system and new skin will quickly replace the diseased tissue. Get a bottle of S. S. S. today of any druggist but don't permit anyone to fool you with something claimed "just as good." Write to The Swift Specific Co., 111 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. for a beautiful book "What the Mirror Tells." And if you want advice on any severe form of blood trouble write the company's medical department.

Success of a Medicine

All things succeed which fill a real need; that a doctor is kept busy day and night proves his ability and skill; that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is sold in enormous quantities in almost every city, town and hamlet in America and in foreign countries as well proves its merit, and women are found everywhere who tell of health restored by its use.—Advertisement.
