What Sort of Men Are Popular

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

People are always telling us that fashions in women have changed. Then have fashions in women have changed. Then have fashions in women to the stable machine sex changed to match?

The girl of to-day is very different from her grandmother. Has her ideal of manhood departed widely from that of the girl of fifty years ago?
Roger J. B. writes me: "Do please tell me what nice girls ime what nice girls me what nice girls me what nice girls and strong and clean-out. I can't understand them and I try so hard to give up all my own preferences to please them. But they always pass me up for some other fellows. Now I get on splendidly with the dear old grandmother who raised me, and all her friends say I'm a "fine boy." But the girls are so different—they don't seem to appreciate the same consideration. How can I change to please them."

Don't change, Roger. Feminine TASTE has altered, but feminine NATURE remains the same. I grant you that old-fashioned courtesy and respect and deference, but that deference, but that dashow of a doubt that manners do not make the man.

Billiant plumage has ceased to allure. The woman of to-day is learning to distrust the peacock's tail! She has begun to realize that however much the brilliancy of the peacock has no soul to satisfy her heart.

So you cannot win a nice girl of them.

How to Attract
So you cannot win a nice girl of them.

However much fashions in men and women have changed since you would be proud to manners, or even the "clean-cut" look that bespeaks health and clothes or elaborate with part of the sort you would be proud to marners, or even the "clean-cut" look that bespeaks health and clothes or elaborate with provided the sort you would be proud to marners, or even the "clean-cut" look that bespeaks health and clothes or elaborate with provided the sort you would be proud to marners, or even the "clean-cut" look that bespeaks health and clothes or elaborate with provided the sort you would be proud to marners, or even the "clean-cut" look that bespea would have to move on.

He did not return to his lodging house for the little supply of clothes he had gathered, though he had paid for his room in advance. He knew that every other city in the country would soon be added to the police mesh, and he determined to leave the paved streets for the quiet and seclu-sion of country roads. In a section of the city where the poorer people did their shopping he bought a tip of meat and a box of crackers. He still had $25, and he would have spent the most of it for a kit of tools, but he did not dare run the risk. He managed to pick up in a small shop a soldering outfit, a light hammer, resin, a spool of wire and a few other essentials for a tinker's outfit. He made a light pack and as night was falling found his way southward out of the city. It was summer, and he could sleep in barns and stables or in the open dur-ing fair weather. He determined to travel on foot by night and sleep by

Into the lower bay of New York came welling one of the highest tides of the early summer. Higher and higher the water rose until the nests of the marsh fowl floated away and of only the top of the New Jersey sedge was to be seen. The highest of the hummocks in the meadows was covered. With the turning of the tide their gatherings of spindrift were returned to the waters whence they came and the dead friend of Montgomery floated from Newark bay through the Kill von Kull to the harbor of New

Among the scores of telephone ports from Harbor Squad A at Pier No. 1, North river, during this busy season of the year for the men on the police boats, one read, "Body of convict found floating near Tompkinsville, Staten Island. Sent to morgue."

This report was made direct to central office. Mike Kearney was prepar-ing a new circular to send broadcast and stimulate interest in the recapture of James Montgomery when the desk lieutenant called him and showed him the slip from Harbor A. He read it carefully and handed it back, then put his unfinished composition in his desk, picked up his weatherbeaten derby and supply of money. He yearned for a chance to work with his hands, but he feared to show himself in the daytime as yet. At the end of a week he learned from an afternoon paper that the local police had posted circulars offer-of the man who had escaped only re cently from Sing Sing. But Kearney was no careless worker. He asked to be shown the body itself, but because of the wear of the elements he could make no satisfactory identification of the features. A month had passed since his quarry had slipped him.

"- AND A LOAF OF BREAD"

How often have you heard this careless off-hand expression at the store or over the phone. Bread is the morgue keeper to show him the clothes taken from the body of the convict brought in by the harbor police. He examined them and found the white disk and star Montgomery had won by five years of exemplary conduct. This would have assured a skill can produce.

How often have you heard this dareless off-hand expression at the store or over the phone. Bread is the most important food we have, yet purchased most carelessly by many people.
