MANN FLAYS PALMER FOR ABSENTEEISM

Pennsylvanian Caught in Attempt to Fool the House on How He Voted

Special to The Telegraph
Washington, D. C., July 15.—The House yesterday voted to accept the Senate amendment to the legislative appropriation bill providing for a twenty-cent mileage allowance for the traveling expenses of members of Congress. The House provision, reluctantly agreed to some weeks ago, provided only bare traveling expenses. The Senate restored the old rate, and yesterday the House, after a debate led by Representative A. Mitchell Palmer in opposition, and Representatives Mann and Fitzgerald in favor, by a vote of 132 to 22, accepted the Senate amendment.

This item has held the big $37,000,000 supply measure in deadlock for weeks. The legislative bill will now go to the President for his approval, with the sundry civil, rivers and harbors and Indian appropriation bills still in conference or unacted upon by the Senate. The rivers and harbors measure has not yet passed the Senate, and probably will occupy the attention of that body several weeks.

Representative Mitchell Palmer denounced the twenty-cent mileage rate as "graft." He sought to compromise the cent rate, and has let the House vote for a reduction in the last two months. His attitude brought down upon Mr. Palmer a severe rebuke from Representative James H. Mann, minority leader. The exchange of words between Mr. Palmer and Minority Leader Mann was sensational and personal.

"Welcome, Mr. Palmer!"
"When I see the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Palmer) in the House I feel like saying to him, 'Welcome to our city,' snapped Mr. Mann. "The gentleman will admit that it is only recently that I have been absent, and that he has not been here for five months." "Oh, I made substantially the same remark when the gentleman made the motion to extend the appropriation under the legislative appropriation bills as suggested by Mr. Palmer, and impossible to get reported from the committee on rules on anything. He denounced the committee on rules for not holding any meetings, saying that the chairman had permitted away to avoid action on the woman suffrage resolution and the prohibition amendment."

Mann On Mileage
Continuing his remarks upon mileage, Mr. Mann added: "Now some of the gentlemen think twenty cents a mile is too much, and some think it is too little. I am sure many of the other gentlemen who have spoken, I do not care whether Congress pays twenty cents a mile or no mileage. I shall not decline a nomination or election in either event. But while I am a member of the House, I shall be in Washington in attendance at the sessions of the House. And I think it comes in my duty as a member of the House to talk about mileage graft when he has drawn his salary while engaged in political work for himself at home, and who has not been present in the House. And when gentlemen talk about mileage, I would like to see the name of the one who took graft as a grafter. I would like to see the name of any member of this House who has declined to receive what he calls this graft."

"I do not believe it if it is true. If I would not be a grafter and take it, I would not be a grafter and take it. The gentleman who calls it graft is a grafter if he is not a grafter. I am sure that the gentleman who is here are worrying about the mileage. I wonder if the gentleman from Pennsylvania does not enforce the law in reference to absences and salary. The law provides that a member of the House shall not receive his salary while he is absent."

"Does he take it?" asked Mr. Mann, concluding. "If it is true to make mileage to take salary which the law forbids? I suggest to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that people who live in glass houses, and mighty thin glass at that, had better be careful not to throw stones. I am rising to debate a proposition about graft of other people. He had better reform himself, and not try to reform me. He has to try to take the mote out of the eyes of others."
