day that the constitutionalists would be temperate in their acts when they enter Mexico City. They believe there is no danger of wholesale killing or locting.

Senor Riano, the Spanish ambassador, called upon Secretary Bryan to-day to make representations for the safety of Spanish citizens in Mexico City. He was unable to say whether the Spanish embassy would continue to represent Mexico in the United States under Provisional President Carbajal.

May Extend Recognition

May Extend Recognition

The United States to-day instructed John R. Silliman, American consul at Saltillo, to inform General Carranza, that if he arrives at a peaceful agreement with the Carbajal government for the transfer of power at Mexico City, recognition will be extended to the resultant administration.

Should Carranza refuse to complete the settlement of the internal conflict by diplomatic means and insist on a forcible entry into Mexico City, recognition will be deferred until there is a legal election. American forces, according to present plans, will not be withdrawn from Vera Cruz until a government is recognized.

This determination was reached by President Wilson and Secretary Bryan after the viewpoint of the South American mediators was laid before them. Recognition Was Promised Under the terms of a protocol signed at Niagara Falls, the United States, Argentine, Brazil and Chile went on record promising recognition to the government set up by any sagreement between the two Mexican factions. To vitalize that protocol the Washington government and the mediators now are bending their efforts. The first move toward effecting a transfer of government to the constitutionalists already has been taken by Provisional President Carbajal. The three peace commissioners—on their way to confer with Carranza or his division commander—General Obregon, are thoroughly constitutionalistic in their political beliefs and were conspicuous members of the Maderista party. They are also close personal friends of Carbajal. He has sent them to confer with the constitutionalistic chief because he believes they can obtain satisfactory terms for the transition of the government.

Merely Wants Guarantees
Minister Suarez, of Chile, said it was his belief that Carbajal merely wanted guarantees that the lives and property of the people in federal territory would be conserved through a general ammesty proclamation. When that was arranged he believed a transition of would be promotify effected.

A military band played martial airs outside of Villa's headquarters as the news of Huerta's resignation was spread about.

The sudden turn of affairs at the national capital led to speculation regarding what troops of the Constitutionalist army would be the first to enter Mexico City. The forces under Generals Aguilar and Obregon are nearest, but Villa officials last night thought troops of all divisions would be represented in a triumphal entry. Villa's army cannot be moved southward for several weeks.

General Villa is expected to return south and have his entire army moving toward Mexico City within eight days. The Villa troops are spread over southern Chihuahua. While at Juarez General Villa will arrange for supplies. It is known that his supply of artillery ammunition is ample, but he is short of rifle cartridges.

Is Victory For Wilson

By Associated Press

London, July 16.—General Huerta's resignation of the provisional presidency of Mexico is regarded as a victory for President Wilson's policy and is welcomed by the British public and in official circles here as a possible solution of the Mexican problem. A peaceful end to the complex situation is greatly desired here on account of the large British financial interests in the country.

eral envoys who started from Mexico City for Celaya to arrange with the Constitutionalists for peaceful entry into the capital. The committee consisted of three former members of the chamber of deputies. On what basis they hoped to negotiate for the transition of power was not indicated. Many diplomats in Washington, however, thought Francisco Carbajal, who was sworn in as successor to Huerta, might be disposed to accept the terms of the plan of Guadalupe, which provided for the naming of Carranza, Constitutionalist chief, as provisional president, pending elections throughout the republic.

Jubliant Over Prospects

While President Wilson and Secretary Bryan were silent after the announcement of Huerta's resignation, they were jubliant over prospects for early adjustment of the problem that has vexed two administrations and threatened to plunge the United States into a foreign war. The Washington government will not recognize the new provisional president, but the understanding here is that he will hold office only until arrangements can be made for Carranza's occupation of Chapultepec Castle.

Carbajal, it was believed, hoped only

Carbajal, it was believed, hoped only for the declaration of general amnesty for the forces that have opposed the northern armies and certain property guarantees. The Constitutionalists have declared they would not enter into ne-sociations with Huerta's successor, but hope was confidently expressed that sotiations with Huerta's successor, but hope was confidently expressed that some basis of parleys might be found by which military conquest of the capital could be averted. One plan suggested for the peaceful transfer of control without involving recognition of the federal administration contemplated the resignation of Carbajal and the assumption of authority by local officials in Mexico City. They, in turn, would surrender their restricted power upon the arrival of the Constitution-lists.

The South American mediators who rought about the cessation of hostilies between the United States and the ties between the United States and the Huerta government would continue their efforts, it was believed, to clear the way for conferences between the two Mexican factions aimed at avoiding the possibility of further bloodshed. Carranza, they thought, would gain by entering into such conferences, because he might by that means guarantee for himself immediate recognition of the Washington and the South Americann governments.

However, should he refuse to parley, and insist upon hurling an army at the tottering Mexican capital, probably recognition would be withheld until elections took place throughout the republic.

follow the collapse of the Huerta cause.

Not Safe to Remain

They point out that many federal army officers will feel it is not safe to remain at their posts to await the coming of the Constitutionalists and the result will be demoralization of the military now operating the railways.

Evidence is not lacking of this condition at the gap, where it is known the government had issued orders to repair the break in the line, but the soldiers refused to permit reconstruction because they lacked orders from the war department.

The American officers think it possible the next day or two may see many Mexican officers seeking safety within the American lines. They believed it is even possible that virtually the whole federal force near Vera Cruz may offer to surrender to the Americans rather than seek to join the Constitutionalist cause at this late hour.

Huerta Boarded Train Outside of Capital

By Associated Press

By Associated Press

Mexico City, July 16. — General Huerta and General Blanquet left the capital last night. They boarded a train on the Mexican railway a few miles beyond the city. It is thought they are going to Puerto Mexico.

Before his departure Huerta went to the National Palace to pay his respects to President Carbajal.

There was complete lack of disorder in the capital last night and the theaters and cafes were crowded. The populace is now hopefur that peace is in sight. Huerta's popularity apparently increased greatly after his resignation, as Mexicans now look upon him as a good loser.
