fact that the Grange is supposed to be a nonpartisan body made no difference to the "Farmer." And neither did the fact that his "address" was made to an audience of only four men.

Cost of Living is High

The "address" of the embattled "Farmer" was a gem in its inappropriateness. Eight on the heels of announcements in the daily papers that the cost of foodstuffs was up and going up, the "Farmer" admitted that it cost more to live, and all this in spite of the Patriot's insistence that conditions are ideal and that wallets are stuffed full of psychological banknotes.

This is what the "farmer" said—to his typewriter: "To the city consumer the high cost of living is an ever-present impelling fact, a painful fact, full of worry, with no redeeming point. And it is quite the common sense of the farmer. This makes the farmer mad clean through, for he is getting mighty little of the increased price the consumer has to pay. The profits of the farmer are, in fact, so small that his problem, like that of the average urbanite, is to make both ends meet."

When the committee did get together for a seance Cressy had it embodied a number of his stock demands, and announced that the national administration had granted all demands, but the state none.

Next a resolution was adopted declaring that all candidates and committees and organizations in the interest of any candidate should comply with the letter and spirit of the corrupt practices act and file expense accounts. The fact that over a dozen Palmer-McCormick campaign committees are reported not to have filed accounts for the money sent to them by Robert Toland, treasurer of the Palmer-McCormick campaign committee, probably never occurred to the "Farmer" when he raised his flag.

Adopted Platform

The grange committee adjourned about noon after having spent five hours discussing a platform. It will embody demands for the initiative,
