Aunt Este's Stories For Children

My dear little ones: Will you listen to the story of How Lady Bug Got a Day Off? I know that each and every one of you have at some time or other in your life said these four lines: 'Lady Bug, Lady Bug, Fly away home, Your house is on fire, And your children will burn.' Well, it all happened in this way. You see Lady Bug had ever so many children. There were little Lady Bugs and Gentlemen Bugs of all description, each and every one wearing little brown dresses with black polkadots, like Lady Bug herself, and she was the mother of them all. Now Lady Bug never stirred from the front porch of her home, so everyone thought she was a very homesy sort of a person. She only seemed to like to embroider polkadots on her babies' dresses. Mother doesn't care for dresses, but she likes to see them. So she never goes anywhere. My dear little ones, don't care to fly around and see the sights, said Daddy Bug, when he went down town with his little Bug neighbors. 'She is perfectly happy at home sewing for the babies or rocking them to sleep.' That was all because neither the children nor Daddy Bug really knew Mamma Lady Bug—that is the REAL Mamma Lady Bug. The truth of the matter was that every time she dressed up the little Lady Bugs to go to a party her very heart was aching to put on her prettiest dress and go to one too. For Mamma Lady Bug had never forgotten those days when she had danced and sung and had a good time herself. But she never let the little bugs know this because she thought it might spoil their good time to know how very much she wanted to go herself. So she washed their faces and combed them and then kissed them all good-by, but never a word did she say. She fairly ached to go down to a neighbor's herself—but then when could she do the mending if she did? So she got so much in the habit of staying at home, that no one ever thought of asking Lady Bug to anything that went on—and if her name ever was mentioned someone was sure to say, 'Oh, Mrs. Lady Bug?' She won't come, because she likes so much to stay at home. One day Lady Bug got to thinking and she thought very hard. 'See here,' she said to herself. 'I don't see why I shouldn't have a good time as well as my children and my husband. I think I'll go down town. I'm just going to tell them to-night I am going out some place once a week.' So that evening Lady Bug timidly started, 'Daddy Bug,' said she, 'I think I should get away from home once a week. I get so tired sitting in the house all the time.' But Daddy Bug just looked at her in amazement, for he had gotten so used to have her at home he thought she was getting crazy, so he never answered her. 'See here,' said he, as he put on his hat and went down town. 'Something must have gone wrong at home to-day.' So Lady Bug turned to the children. 'Children,' said she, 'I
