German Officers Telephoning in the Field

The German army organization is believed to be the most perfect as well as the greatest in the world. This photograph shows army officers telephoning from a forest in the dark of the night. Not even a lantern was permitted. The photograph was taken by flashlight, which was a concession to the photographer.

WAR WILL PUT AN END TO MONARCHIES

So Declares Oscar S. Straus, the "Unofficial American Ambassador" in London

London, Aug. 10.—Oscar S. Straus, whom the thousands of stranded Americans in London are calling "The unofficial American Ambassador," has sent the following message to the American People:

"What has happened in the last six days, and what is happening to-day, is less important than the final outcome of it will be in my opinion. In the great blessing that will result from this titanic world clash will be the obliteration of every monarchy in Europe. I do not believe that there are any men living who can foresee what this clash of armies between the leading nations of Europe may lead to, but in the loss of human life, in suffering and destruction of property and in economic derangement, it must dwarf into insignificance the cost of the Napoleonic Wars.

"This is no mere clash between Germany and the allies. It is not even a war between four or five world powers. Even if one or two main belligerents should be victorious, it will not end the war, but simply be lighting new fires of war with more lurid glare.

"No doubts that the high-handed and arbitrary attitude of Germany will force Italy to become a belligerent, allied with Great Britain, France and Russia? Nobody can who understands the situation.

"This itself opens one of the gravest issues of the entire war. It is perhaps the most unfortunate phase of the entire situation—this alliance between the two advanced parliamentary governments with Russia a medieval autocracy.

"The responsibility rests upon England and France to compel Russia to modernize her governmental system and that right away. Upon them rests the burden of forcing Russia to give equal rights to all her subjects. Otherwise the alliance, instead of proving a bulwark of strength, will become a burden. How can Russia expect the people she has systematically oppressed and denied all civil rights to be patriotic?

"The reason the citizens of France and the subjects of Great Britain, without respect to class or creed, have risen to the highest point of patriotism is because those governments have been and are just to all.

"Unless Russia is made to see, unless she accords now at once full rights to those whose patriotism she relies on, she will have to contend with revolution within.

"I have spoken to a number of statesmen and other prominent men here and in France and expressing their views, I have no doubt France and England fully appreciate the gravity of this responsibility.

"They will use their influence to this end aside from all other reasons for the sake of having a strong ally that will measure up to the standard of civilized nations."

Thieves Bind and Gag Woman and Rob House

Special to The Telegraph
 Columbia, Pa., Aug. 10.—Mrs. Joseph Meisinger, while seated in her home in South street, was assaulted by two strangers, who entered unobserved as the woman was reading a newspaper. They attacked her before she was able to make an outcry and bound her hands and feet and stuffed a gag in her mouth. The men ransacked the house and under a mattress in an upstairs bedroom found $6.75, which they took and then made their escape. The attack was made after 10 o'clock on Friday night and it was 11 o'clock before the woman could release her feet, and make her way to a hotel at the corner of South and Washington streets. Chief Campbell of the night-watchman responded promptly, but the strangers had made good their escape.

LUCILLE LOVE, AT THE PALACE

When Lucille learned that Loubeque was to meet Lieutenant Hadley at the (Loubeque's) home, she at once hastened to the rendezvous herself. As she was the first to reach the house, she went through the house so many times. When she beheld a picture of Loubeque upon the wall, she removed the picture and behind it found a switchboard. No sooner than she had mastered the system of the switchboard, Lieutenant Hadley arrived. In an instant she laid her plan of action. She informed Hadley that Loubeque was not there, but that he would leave on the Golden State Limited that night. Hadley was satisfied and left.

A few moments later Loubeque arrived to keep his appointment with the Secretary of War. He found Lucille. As Loubeque leaned against the desk Lucille pressed the proper button and Loubeque fell through the floor with the heavy desk upon him. Lucille crept into the cellar and removed the documents from his inside pocket. An instant later Loubeque recovered and ran after the girl, but he was just one moment too late. She ran to the mouth of the secret tunnel, and just before Loubeque grasped her in his arms she closed down and locked the iron gate. Loubeque rushed to the railroad station and caught the outgoing train. Loubeque also arrived, but he was too late. Lucille was gone forever with the papers. Returning to his home, Loubeque told Gibson that Lucille was on her way to Washington with the documents, but Gibson thought the spy was lying to him. Each took a sword and decided they would settle the argument with blood.

Lucille delivered the documents to the Secretary of War, and she saved the name of her father and of her sweetheart, Lieutenant Gibson. Gibson arrived while Lucille was yet with the Secretary. He fell at Lucille's feet and begged her forgiveness for mistaking her. Lucille was only too willing to re-establish him in her heart. That night Loubeque wrote in his diary:

"My debt of hate toward Sumpter Love is canceled, for no hate can outlive love in the man who has known Lucille."

Loubeque loved Lucille.—Advertisement.
