

Great Opportunity For American Industries in South American Field

Grace & Co., said that there was no doubt that this country would get a great amount of trade as the result of the war now being waged in Europe. He explained that as soon as the credit situation was worked out successfully by the banks—and that is being done now—the exporters in this country would be in a position to do business with the South American merchants. "There undoubtedly will be a big increase in our trade with South American countries," he said. "The business cannot fail but be developed gradually. The South American countries in the present situation must turn to use for supplies which hitherto they have been getting from Europe. The business of this country should increase accordingly."

It was predicted yesterday that the steel mills in this country would do a big business in the South American countries, to which foreign steel and iron manufacturers have been shipping a great amount of their products, particularly for building purposes. There will be a demand for such things on the part of the South American countries as they begin to re-build and redevelop their countries. The business of this country should increase accordingly.

Silver Candlesticks Used in Revolutionary Times Latest Contributions to the Cause

Contributions to Harrisburg's melting-pot, the proceeds of which will go toward creating a fund to be used in furthering suffrage campaigns in several States, continue to-day. Mrs. Mabel Cronise Jones, president of the Central Pennsylvania Association, will have the articles weighed to-morrow. Although the National Association has requested that articles be sent to Chicago, where a real melting-pot is to be constructed and the articles dropped in it while a motion picture photographer snaps the action, if the Harrisburg collection turns out to be of unusual weight it will be shipped head-on to Chicago, Philadelphia and disposed of at the mint there. Although August 13 is the day set for putting in the lid, the melting-pot, articles received after that time, it was announced to-day, will be weighed and weighed in order to estimate the amount of gold and silver bullion that will be obtained from the Harrisburg collection. STEELTON FOREIGN POPULACE WARNED AGAINST OUTBURSTS

Burgess Wigfield Forbids Street Parades or Similar War Demonstrations

BIG SUM FOR RED CROSS

Mere Boy and Bent Old Man Are the First to Lay Savings on the Table

In an address at an enthusiastic mass meeting of Slavs in Steelton yesterday afternoon Burgess Wigfield, himself an Englishman by birth, forbade sympathizers with any of the warring European nations from holding street parades or war demonstrations of any kind. He advised them, further, to remain quiet and refrain from discussing the war situation with any adherents of the opposing forces.

The meeting was held in Croatian Hall, South Second street, and was the purpose of raising additional funds for the Serbian Red Cross. More than 200 Slavs filled the long, narrow benches or benches around the walls, packing the little hall to almost capacity. When Burgess Wigfield, accompanied by members of the Red Cross committee, fled into the room and took their places on a raised stage in the front of the room there was a great outburst of handclapping and loud shouts of "Zivio! Zivio!" (Slavish for "Hurrah!") from the big audience.

The meeting was presided over by Stevan Memic and Steven Koncar. Beside them on the stage were Vojvo Ivanovic, chairman of the Serbian Red Cross committee; K. Pozeka, secretary; Juro Oratic, Stanko Srbc, Mile Minic and Michel Horvath, members of the committee; Burgess Wigfield, Chief of Police H. P. Longaker and Adolph E. Johnson.

Chairman Memic opened the meeting with a short address reviewing the week's developments in Europe. Kazimir Pozeka, secretary of the Red Cross committee, introduced Burgess Wigfield.

In a short speech Burgess Wigfield forbade parades, advised against heated discussions of the war and complimented the Slavs for their enthusiasm and for their liberal support to the Red Cross fund. He called attention to the fact that "Steelton is a cosmopolitan town, containing many subjects of every one of the nations now at war."

"We are all members of one family," said the burgess, "and we should sympathize with our brothers of all nations. When this great war is over we will have a great, long peace. I am glad to see that you have contributed so liberally to the fund to alleviate the sufferings of the widows and orphans of all the warring nations."

"Now, men, you are here in a neutral country. You can have no part in the struggle. Don't let your enthusiasm get away with you. Street demonstrations of any warlike nature are forbidden. Maintain your present peaceful attitude and don't let your enthusiasm get away with you. Refrain from discussing the war with adherents of the opposing forces, especially if you are a drinker or a gambler. If you don't follow this advice and break the law, you will be arrested and fined and maybe placed in jail. Now you are all poor men; we don't want to fine you, for you can use your money in other ways."

Money for Red Cross

Following Burgess Wigfield's talk short speeches were made by Stevan Memic, Kazimir Pozeka, Steven Koncar and Vojvo Ivanovic. Then the $300 raised last Sunday was placed on the table on the stage and the subscription list for the Red Cross fund was opened.

The first to contribute was Mele D. Bogdovich, a mere boy, who marched proudly up the table and deposited a crisp $5 bill. This was followed by $10 he contributed earlier in the week. He was followed by Jovo Marin, a bent old man, who placed a $10 note, and then by another man, whose name was not recalled. Then came Nikola Zutic, a little man, with $20—and so on until nearly $600 in cash lay on the table.
