BRUMBAUGH'S STAND
R. MARTIN G. BRUMBAUGH'S declaration in favor of a submission of the local option proposition to the people will satisfy all its supporters save those who are more interested in playing politics than they are in the success of the measure itself. Coincident with the announcement of his candidacy in the primary campaign the distinguished gubernatorial nominee of the Republican party declared:

The problem of the liquor traffic is a vital one. I submit that local option is a practical solution. In the same declaration of principles Dr. Brumbaugh said:

I agree that we need a moral standard in all public service. I welcome a campaign upon the great moral issues of the day. Let us be honestly frank and frankly honest with the people.

And in his Pittsburgh speech, reaffirming the pledges of his primary platform, he said:

For these I now stand. For them I shall stand steadily to the end. No other course could appeal to me as honestly and justly as this. I am asking them and their fellow-citizens to do so in November. They can do so confidently. Having put my hand to the plow, I shall not look back, but forward, plowing as straight as straight as God helps me to plow.

These are the words of a sincere and honest man who means to deal fairly with the people and to stoop to no deception to win their votes.

It is going to be impossible for the ambitious coterie that has purchased control of the Democratic party for a little time to persuade the voters of Pennsylvania that the Republican ticket is not immeasurably superior in every way to the boss-chosen and White House-sponsored combination arrayed against it.

So that while a few weeks must elapse before the verdict of the people shall have been recorded there can be no doubt in the minds of those who are at all in touch with public sentiment and the trend of public opinion as to the result. The election of the Republican State ticket by a large vote is assured.

Gradually the dangerous rocks and stumps and tree trunks outside the river wall are being removed. It is expected that as soon as the river shall have receded to the low-water stage the cleaning up of the debris will proceed vigorously.

NO LABOR PARADE: WHY?
FOR the first time in thirty years, there will be no Labor Day parade in New York city this fall.

The labor unions have decided to take the money the parade would cost and use it to relieve unemployed union men.

In times past, in New York city, many thousands of union men have marched on the first Monday in September. Their parades have been spectacular. No money was spared in making them a success. The horses in the parade were union-shod and the men union-equipped. There were union bands and union badges. There were union-made uniforms and union refreshments. So that the expense to the union men for their Labor Day parade, in one way or another, led to an expenditure running into a great sum of money. All this is to be foregone this year and the unions, very commendably, will turn the money to help their unemployed brothers.

This instance of practical charity on the part of union organizations is attracting wide attention over the country and has caused considerable comment, especially in view of President Wilson's statement that the hard times are purely "psychological."

But why should workmen in a naturally prosperous country like this be compelled to forego their Labor Day parade in order to help needy fellows? Democratic tariff tinkering is the answer, and here is the absolute proof of it. Imports in July this year exceeded the imports for July of last year, under the Payne-Aldrich tariff act, by $21,116,863. In other words the country has been flooded with millions of dollars worth of the products of cheap European labor.

There was a steady increase in the importations of cheap European goods until the war began, and then foreign commerce to this country ended so suddenly as to bring the Administration face to face with a shortage of $100,000,000.

According to the figures on imports and exports issued by the Department of Commerce, the July imports aggregated $160,178,133, compared with $139,061,770 in July of last year. The July exports were $154,082,235, as against $160,990,778. The foreign commerce of the United States in July, 1914, amounted to $214,260,358, an increase of $14,207,810, and this increase was all on the side of imports. For the seven-month period ended with July this year, the total trade was valued at $2,342,019,655, or $3,902,157 below that for a corresponding period a year ago.

These figures clearly show that what Republicans said would happen has happened. Foreign made goods were being brought into this country, when the war stopped shipments, by the million dollars worth. They were crowding our own products, made by well paid workmen, off the market. The result has been idleness for thousands of men, and no Labor Day parade.

United States Senator Root declared in a recent speech that Democratic experimenting with the tariff had been carried out in a spirit of hostility to American industries. Nobody can doubt the truth of this assertion when he looks about him and sees the dire results of the Democratic tinkering.

WORRIED BOSSES
AS was to be expected, the Democratic newspapers supporting the Palmer-McCormick faction find nothing to commend in the Republican nominees or the platform of principles enunciated by the State committee at Pittsburgh. They pretend to believe that the party is wedded to its idols and is reactionary beyond recovery.

Unfortunately for the little men who are wabbling around in the shoes of such men as Randall and Wallace and Wolverson and other Democrats of their type, they cannot appreciate or understand the progressive record of the party which they now profess to detest.

So well assured are the Republican leaders of the substantial sympathy of thousands of voters not identified with the Republican party, but who will support its candidates this year, that the closing plank of the Pittsburgh platform has peculiar significance. It is an open invitation to all voters to rally to the colors of the party of protection and prosperity and reads as follows:

We ask the support of all Pennsylvanians in our efforts to bring about the restoration of prosperity to Pennsylvania and extend a cordial welcome to all electors, regardless of past party affiliations, who are in sympathy with this declaration of principles.

Perhaps nothing in the whole situation has so disturbed the dreams of the McCormicks and Palmers as the rapidly-gathering clouds of Democratic unrest and disfavor. Building up a political machine upon resentment and hate and revenge is a difficult job, as these little men have discovered. Instead of welding together the elements of the discordant Democracy of Pennsylvania, they have done everything within their power to still further antagonize those who have been out of joint with the reorganization faction. And, as a result of this course of action, there are today in Pennsylvania a hundred thousand Democrats who have decided to unhorse the accidental leaders who are now riding for a fall.

Instead of discouragement, such as weakened the Republican organization two years ago, there is now confidence and harmony and determination among Republicans everywhere throughout the State to restore to power and influence in the national councils the party whose record has been one of constant progress and substantial achievement. Not in many years has there been such an alignment of employer and employee with one purpose—the restoration of prosperity and the welfare of all the people—as in the present campaign.

It is, therefore, of little moment what the Palmers and the McCormicks and their sponsors may say or do in the present contest. The voters have already made up their minds and the overwhelming triumph of the Republican party November 3 is as certain as that day follows night.

It is asserted, as a result of District Attorney Whitman's investigation of the cost of living since the European war began, that the United States could stop the war by placing an embargo on wheat, flour and other products. That might be all very well for the fellows who started the fighting, but how about the innocent millions who would be left to starve.

A. Mitchell Palmer returned to Washington yesterday, after the decision of the House to dock every member absent the amount of his daily salary. He was quite peeved and vented his spleen in another of his yammering attacks on Senator Penrose.

It is now admitted by the Wilson administration that the war tax is inevitable, but not a word is said about the reduction of the revenues of the country by the wiping out of the protective tariff that placed the burden upon the foreign importers and not upon the people of the United States.

Not satisfied with the difficulties which now confront this nation, the administration at Washington is fussing over independence for the Philippines, having gone so far as to semi-officially submit for the approval of the leaders in the archipelago the measure which is now pending in Congress. An Administration proposal is thus sent out before its consideration by the legislative department as the program of the people of the United States. Is there an end to the blundering?

Senator Penrose doesn't even blink an eye when the pea-shooter of one A. Mitchell Palmer is turned in his direction. He simply goes on his way reminding the people of the effects of Democratic tariff tinkering, the necessity for the Republican protective system, and the direful results of amateur statesmanship. Palmer may pose and declaim until the cows come home, but the people are listening now to those who represent the constructive, and not the destructive forces of the country.

A RETURN TO SANITY
[From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.]
A return to sanity has been evident in the political world for some time. We pointed out more than a month ago that the primaries in the Middle West demonstrated this fact. Impetus to the flare-back from demagoguery has been given by the great war. It has brought the American people up short, sobered them, taught them the danger of entrusting their affairs to babblers and experimentalists, visionaries and muckrakers, who are thirsty for public salary and blatant notoriety. The tragedy of the times forbids recklessness.

AN EVENING THOUGHT
No impulse is too splendid for the simplest task; no task is too simple for the most splendid impulse.—Phillips Brooks.

EVENING CHAT

People who have been observing the freight traffic through this city on the Pennsylvania and Reading lines have been struck by the enormous amounts of soft coal which are being rushed to seaboard. Rushed is the proper word because immense trains of steel cars are being hurried through the classification yards hourly, some of the trains being made up solidly for New York or Philadelphia or Boston. These trains come from central counties and whole train loads are consigned to some firms, there being a strong suspicion that they are going abroad. Not long ago there was a story current in the city that the Italian government had been a large buyer of coal and that the orders given would keep a couple of mines busy for weeks to come. Some of the trains brought through the city come by way of the Connelville cutoff, being delivered to the Rutherford yards by Western Maryland crews. These are largely solid trains of steel cars of the largest size and are probably loaded into ships a few days after they are dumped from the coal tipples. The war in Europe has had the effect of stirring up the soft coal industry and the orders given lately and in prospect should keep many of the mines in the Allegheny mountain district and in western counties running for some time to come.

Postmaster Frank C. Sites, of this city, treasurer of the National Association of Postmasters, has been commissioned with the pleasant duty of presenting a gavel to leader Sobel, former postmaster of Erie, and for two years president of the national association. The gavel was made by order of the recent convention at St. Paul and the handle is made of metal of Mr. Sobel's native State.

Much of the success of the 1914 summer camp for boys and girls conducted on McGowan Island, under the direction of the Park Department, was undoubtedly due to the staff of instructors that Supervisor J. K. Staples had selected for the purpose and among those who helped materially to maintain the standard during the latter part of the season was Dr. Jay Hoffer, a brother of Assistant Far Superintendent J. R. Hoffer. The junior Mr. Hoffer is this summer vacation with the boys at the island camp.

Speaking about the presence of former National Guardsmen of Pennsylvania in regiments of Francis Joseph's empire and the fact that some of the best soldiers in the coal regions were men of foreign birth, a National Guardsman tells this interesting anecdote of one of the anthracite coal strikes: In one instance, near Tamaqua, it was reported to the commanding officer that a trumpeter had been blowing signals to the strikers whenever the soldiers were seen coming into the vicinity. The matter was immediately investigated and it was found that the man was a crippled miner, who was then working at shoemaking at his home in the Panther Creek Valley. He was a Spaniard and had served as a musician in the Fifth United States Cavalry at the same time that a sergeant in the Governor's Troop had been in that regiment. Both soldiers were in quarters at Fort Leavenworth at the same time, although then unacquainted, and they had many a chat together afterward. The man was an excellent citizen and was only keeping up his trumpet practice.

Dr. H. A. Surface, the State Zoologist, says that half the people do not know how to eat a peach. This is a fact, because he has seen specimens of peaches being brought to the trouble with most people who come to eat this most delicious of our fruits, says the zoologist, is that most of them pare the peach. The finest flavor is in the skin and it is cut off. What should be done, he contends, is to slip off the skin of the peach. This retains the flavor and some of the most delicate flesh.

A considerable agitation is going on among people in the city for some solution of the high school problem. It is recognized that the trouble is coming through the increase of population and extension of courses that something must be done soon and the experts adopted to care for the pupils are being discarded. The approach of school days will cause this topic to be uppermost and the time to get the matter settled is during the winter.

The arrangement of the battleflags in the State Capitol has been warmly commended by many of the Sixteeners who were here for the reunion and most of yesterday's correspondents. To the great rotunda has been brought by those who can appreciate next to the veterans themselves the historic emblems of Pennsylvania's warfare.

HOME FOLKS GREET

"MART" BRUMBAUGH
Notable Reception Given by Huntingdon Counties to the Republican Nominee Today

BACK TO THE HOME GROUND
Montgomery County Democrats Engage in Brawl; Bull Moozers Stand by Lewis

This is Brumbaugh day in Huntingdon county and the home folks are going to give a greeting to the Republican nominee for Governor that will shake the whole State that the Juniata valley, which has been a center in independent movements for years, is solidly behind its distinguished son. Brumbaugh from Huntingdon county indicated the fact that the county is a strenuously active county are going to greet the man whose fame as an educator is national, but that folks from Blair, Bedford, Juniata, Centre, Mifflin and even from Perry are going to unite with them in attesting interest in Dr. Brumbaugh.

Dr. Brumbaugh is expected to meet his relatives at the Brumbaugh family reunion to-day and to-night will go to the county seat, where there will be a reception in the public square. It had been planned for the opera house, but that is too small. To-morrow the doctor will go to Lehigh county to address the voters.

Dr. Brumbaugh will be here next week to attend the Grangers' picnic, as he is to be one of the speakers on Republican Day. This is the first time to see the big day of the picnic and many people who have heard Dr. Brumbaugh speak in the educational department of the Grangers will be here to see him again. A record-breaking crowd is expected on the day he appears in the Harrisburg market as a speaker on Republican Day. The Senator, who is due in Harrisburg to-night, will meet a number of his high county friends to see the great Frank B. McClain and Dr. Henry Houck were here to-day and are planning to go to Lehigh where a great Republican gathering will be held.

His strong and straight-from-the-shoulder declaration that he will stand firmly upon his primary platform, upon which the Republican ticket straight for thirty-six years and will do so this November coming.

HE IS A REPUBLICAN
To the Editor of the Telegraph:

DR. BRUMBAUGH'S SPEECH
(Pittsburgh Gazette Times)
In formally accepting the Republican nomination for governor of Pennsylvania at last evening's State Committee meeting and rally in Pittsburgh Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh frankly stated his position and purposes. He enters the campaign committee by direct nomination at the primary and will not be bound by the platform or the promises made in the Spring. These include justice to labor, good roads, local option, state civility service, submission of the amendment providing for woman's suffrage, reorganized treatment of public charities, and wider freedom in municipal regulation.

Dr. Brumbaugh promises the people of the state that he will not abide principle for preference. He proposes to travel the straight road. He submits his record as a guarantee that he can be relied upon to keep his pledges and do his duty. He repudiates any notion that he is hampered by alliances which bind him to punish enemies or reward friends. He invites all men who are progressively Republican to join him in the project further to advance the commonwealth.

Dr. Brumbaugh's reminder of the developments of two years ago, of the manner in which opportunists misled voters out of the party, and of the shifty character of the platform of this particular opposition, is timely and pointed. With these matters Dr. Brumbaugh has no connection one way or the other. He comes before the people free of the heritage of old scores and contentions, with native pride and gratification in the progress made by Pennsylvania under Republican auspices, and prepared with that splendid vigor and wholesome enthusiasm which has won him high distinction in the field of American education to go forward with the state's work, constructively, reformatively and aggressively, as the demands of existing conditions and enlightened intelligence require.

Dr. Brumbaugh created a good impression last night. His personality is magnetic and winning. His manner is friendly and sincere. His abilities are broad and commanding. His presence is cheerful and inspiring. He will make an effective campaigner because he means what he says and knows how to say what he means. His speech merits reading throughout.

DEMOCRATIC PROMISES
[Pittsburgh Gazette.]
The Democratic party promised and undertook to deliver the average American from the high cost of living and from the "incubus of too great success by others," and to give new life and prosperity to production and commerce, but it has failed in all three respects. The Republican party, through the protective system, preserves the opportunity to advance and develop and to maintain the American standard of wages, and in that it succeeded marvelously under various tariff laws, notably the Dingley and Payne acts. After Wilson's election and inauguration prosperity continued right up to the day the Underwood bill was signed, when the retrograde movement soon set in—and it has not yet stopped. Remember that as election day approaches.

PENROSE AND HIS COMPETITORS
(Philadelphia Inquirer)
Like Brumbaugh, Penrose has two competitors in the Harrisburg market as a candidate for United States Senator. Mr. Pinchot lives in Washington and has heretofore done his voting—when he took the trouble to vote—in New York. Of Pennsylvania and its requirements he is densely ignorant. As a Senator he would be powerless to aid Pennsylvania in any respect whatever. Without influence, without membership on any important committee, he would be utterly useless to the State. Like Lewis, he has no chance whatever of election. Also like Lewis, his sole province is to aid the Democratic Party.
The Democratic Party presents A. Mitchell Palmer, a free trader of free traders, who boasts that he was largely responsible for the deadly iron and steel schedule of the Underwood-Wilson tariff. Mr. Palmer, too, was an unyielding opponent of the law which looked to the building of an American merchant marine through the exemption of tolls for American vessels using the Panama Canal. He advocated and voted for its repeal. He represents the policies of the Democratic administration—policies which blighted the industries of Pennsylvania and closed the doors of many a mill or sent it to half time and consequent reduced wages.
Pennsylvania has suffered severely because of near free trade. Among the three candidates for Senator it is Penrose alone that she can look for any practical help at Washington. Should the Republican Party gain the
