The "war tax," however, may serve country to serious depression. one useful lesson by proving absolute-ly the fallacy of the Democratic doc-quently of late that the European situation will illustrate the economic necessity of tariff protection at all times. The principle of protection was forcibly brought home to the American statesmen showed clearly that the American statesmen public should not be placed at the mercy of Europe. The great argument for protection at that time was to have industries so firmly established in the United States that no European war could deprive us of manufacturers is at the expense of the United States to be made informed to the fields and shops and sent to the from the field corporati dustrially independent of foreign Treasury.

Even now the war will deprive the United States of many articles such as chemicals used in agriculture and manufacturing, and would likewise deprive the country of many manufactured articles, such as textiles and metals, if such industries had not been well established under the protective tariff policy at home.

FAULTY TRANSPORTATION

THE American Society of Thriff draws attention to the great waste in American products, and those of the farm especially, resulting from lack of proper transportation facilities. The words "cost of hauling" are closely allied with the trite "high cost of living" phrase. The loss caused by lack of proper hauling facilities is so enormous that it exceeds in Chicago ahout the site, only a proportion to the size or import.

When it comes down to big corn this section is going some. A traveling man who gets over the country and who visits western states said that the Cumberland Valley could show a few. "I have never seen finer corn. The stalks are high and burdened with ears. The ears are immense. If the wheat was anything like the corn and the peaches, you will have a dandy farm balance," said he.

None of the candidates would chirp about the Marshall statement and all were in fear and trembling lest it would start up old Dr. Bryan, who wrote the plank and who came to make speeches for the machine. However, the impression is general that if it comes to a break between Wilson and Bryan, Palmer and McCormick will throw down Bryan as heartlessly as Palmer threw Guffey and Hall.

OUR DAILY LAUGH

The cave men fought with their knotty fists.

And clubs that were tipped with stone:

With heads held high, and with fearless eye,
They guarded their rights alone.

They hacked at beasts that were huge and fierce.

That prowled where their stores were piled,
And they died at last, and their spirits passed.

Perhaps no confession of failure has ever been more frank than Frank A. Munsey's explanation of his suspension of the Philadelphia Evening Times. He says:

Munseys explanation of the Philadelphia Evening Times. He says:

"Every undertaking is an experiment until it crystalizes into success. The Evening Times has never passed out of the experimental stage, and there is no evidence in sight looking toward its doing so in the near future. If it were nearing the clearing, if success were within the sweep of a telescope. I would continue its publication and back it generously.

"On the surface, Philadelphia was the most alluring town in the world for an evening newspaper venture—a city of vast population, a city of homes, and with fewer evening newspapers than many cities of half or even one-third its size. It was this extraordinary condition that led me to bring out an evenings newspaper in Philadelphia.

out an evenings newspaper in Philadelphia.

"Considered on the basis of population in Philadelphia and the population of the newspaper circuit outside Philadelphia, and the few evening newspapers in the field, there wasn't another opening on earth in its class.

"But the Evening Times hasn't worked out, and that's all there is to it. It shares the fate of these other evening newspaper ventures in Philadelphia—the Evening Star, the Evening News and the Evening Item. There may be others."

"The Letter of the Contract," Basil King's new novel, is announced for publication this week by the Harper's A wife whose married life has been of the happiest learns that her husband had broken their marriage contract. The shock of this knowledge destroys her love for him—she believes—forever. She divorces him in spite of his pleading for forgiveness. Later, urged by loneliness, each marries again the chance meeting brings them together and they realize that a judge's coision could not kill their love for ach ether. Through spiritual struggle they learn what the spirit, not the letter, of marriage means.
