of them was vast silence which seemed to stretch from end to end of the frontier, while to the rear was the rumble of switching railway trains and the rumble of provision trains and artillery on the roads, and in the distance on the plain the headlight of a locomotive cut a swath in the black night. But the breathing of most of the men was not that of slumber, though Eugene and Pilzer slept soundly. Hours passed. Occasional restless movements told of efforts to force sleep by changing position. "It's the waiting that's sickening!" exploded the manufacturer's son under his breath, desperately.

THE LAST SHOT POULTRY SNEWS

When the work was done all re burned behind the knoll except the sentries posted at intervals on the crest to watch. With the aid of a small electric flash, screened by his hands, Dellarme again examined a section of the staff map that outlined the contour of the knoll in relation to the other positions. After this he wrote in his diary the simple facts of the day's events, concluding with a sentiment of gratitude for the honor shown his company and a prayer that he might keep a clear head and do his duty if war came on the morrow.

"Now, every one get all the sleep he can!" he advised the men. -Stransky slept with his head on his arm, soundly; the others slept no better than the men of the 128th. The night passed without any alarm ex-cept that of their own thoughts, and they welcomed dawn as a relief from There was no hot coffee suspense. this morning, and they washed down their rations with water from their canteens. The old sergeant was lying beside Captain Dellarme on the crest, the sunrise in their faces. As the mist cleared from the plain it revealed the white dots of the frontier posts in the meadow and behind them many gray figures in skirmish order, scarcely visible except through the glasses. "It looks like business!" declared the old sergeant. "Yes, it begins the minute they cross the line!" said Dellarme.

His glance sweeping to the rear to scan the landscape under the light of day, he recognized, with a sense of pride and awe, the tactical importance of his company's position in relation to that of the importance of the other companies. Easily he made out the regimental line by streaks of con-cealed trenches and groups of brown uniforms; and here and there were the oblong, cloth stretches of waiting hospital litters. On the reverse slope of another knoll was the farmhouse, marked X on his map as the regimen tal headquarters, where he was to watch for the signal to fall back from his first stand in delaying the enemy's advance. Directly to the rear was the cut through which the company had come from the main pass road, and be yond that the Galland house, which

Now Dellarme disposed his men in line back of the ridge of fresh eafth that they had dug in the night, ready to rush to their places when he blew the whistle that hung from his neck, but he did not allow them a glimpse over the crest.

"I know that you are curious, but powerful glasses are watching for you to show yourselves; and if a battery turned loose on us you'd un rstand,"

Thus the hours wore on, and the church clock struck nine and ten. "Never a movement down there!"

Choosing to go to town by the castle road rather than down the ter-race to the main pass road, Marta, starting for the regular Sunday service of her school, as she emerged from the grounds, saw Feller, gardenhand, a figure of stone shears in watching the appreach of some fieldbatteries.
