more, Md.

Millersburg, Pa., Sept. 12. — Susquehanna football eleven of Millersburg cleared $55 at the festival held on the C. nter street school grounds on Saturday evening. The funds will be used for equipping the team.—James W. Gooding, of Wilmington. Del., and Miss Grace Kawel, of Millersburg, according to a statement in a Baltimore paper, were married in that city Saturday.—Miss Miriam Day has returned to her home at York after a visit at the home of her uncle, D. W. Day.—Mrs. William J. Wray, of Philadelphia, is the guest of R. O. Novinger.—Norman R. Matter, of Lowell, Mass., and Miss Mazie Holmes, of Millersburg, were married at Allentown by the Rev. A. B. Saylor. Mr. Matter is a native of this place, but now engaged in the banking business in Lowell.—Thomas J. Long, proprietor of the Millersburg Hardware Company, whose store was destroyed during the recent fire, has purchased the vacant lot in Market street adjoining the Fairchilds, and will erect thereon a two-story brick building 73 feet deep by 23 feet wide, the lower part to be used by Mr. Long as a hardware store and the second story fitted out for two flats. Work on the new building will be rushed to completion this Fall.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treat-ment, with full instructions. Send no ment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her today if your chil-dren trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child—the chances are it can't belp it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine diffi-sulties by day or night.

LYKENS MEN'S ORGANIZED BIBLE CLASS AND BAND

Lykens, Pa., Sept. 12.—On Saturday last the men's organized Bible class of the United Brethren Church of Lykens held its first annual picnic in the campmeeting grounds at Elizabethville. The church has a band of twenty-four members and an orchestra of eleven pieces, all members of the class. The class was organized about a year ago with fifty members, but has since grown to more than a hundred. The picnic was a great success and was featured with many athletic sports. George Parfet, merchant, one of the organizers of the class, had charge of the sports. The day was opened with a shoe race. First prize was won by Mrs. Edward Hoffman; second, by Harry Blyer; third, by Mrs. Guerney Williard. Fat man's race, first prize, Edward Hoffman. Thin man's race, prize won by Edward Burger, Jr. Fat woman's race, first prize, Mrs. William Kratzer. Thin woman's race, first prize, Mrs. Harry Blyler. ## Aunt Este's Stories For Children

My dear little ones: How often have each and every one of you said this little verse?

verse?

"Jack Spratt could eat no fat,
His wife could eat no lean;
And so between them both, you see,
They licked the platter clean."
I imagine there is no one who will read this little story who does not know that verse, and yet I guess not one of you has

HOW JACK SPRATT CAME TO MARRY MRS. JACK SPRATT.

HOW JACK SPRATT CAME TO MARRY MRS. JACK SPRATT.

Once upon a time in Mother Goose Village lived Old Mrs. Spratt. Oh, no, not Mrs. Jack Spratt, but Mr. Jack Spratt, co, or else he never would have had the name of Spratt. Well, Old Mrs. Spratt had almost as many children as the old woman who lived in the shoe—and they were all such nice well-behaved children. They had such good table manners and were so polite and clean and gentlemanly and lady-like, that when they grew up they had not the slightest trouble to find themselves husbands and wives. So one by one they all left Mother Spratt's how many the standard of the slightest trouble to find themselves husbands and wives. So one by one they all left Mother Spratt's Now Jack was a nice sort for each standard when he was a baby—just a smiling, cooing, sleepingte fellow when he was a baby—just a smiling, cooing, sleepingte fellow when he was a baby—just a smiling, cooing, sleepingte fellow when he had him; and when he got a little older, whenever he wanted anything his brothers and slsters had to give it to him; and when he did not want to do anything he never had to do it. So it really was Old Mrs. Spratt's fault that he grew up into a willful boy and a dreadful sneak—for what he would not eat he WOULD NOT—and because his mother did not make him TRY a little bit of everything he got more and more sneaky each day, until when he was almost a man he ate hardly anything. Now the thing he never would try was fat—fat in any form. So my dear little ones you can imagine what very few things Jack Spratt really could eat. It was not only meat of which he did not eat the fat, but he would not touch butter or cheese or anything fatty—so he got thinner and thinner, until he looked aimost like a shadow—and when he grew to be a young man and went a-courting no one would have him.

no one could possibly cook to please him; and it would be frightfully expensive, two, for we would have to throw so much that was good away, because he would not eat it.

So all the other young men who were Jack Spratt's friends, got married; but poor Jack just lived at home tormenting his old mother and getting thinner each day.

One day, however, Old Mother Hubbard got company It was a niece of her's come to visit her from a distance, and such a great fat girl no one in Mother Goose Village had ever seen! She was so fat she just rolled into town, and every one laughed, and said:

"Wouldn't she and Jack Spratt make a funny team," although they never know at the time that that is exactly what would happen.

She was so fat she just rouse and said:

"Wouldn't she and Jack Spratt make a funny team," although they never know at the time that that is exactly what would happen.

Now you see all the other young men in the town had been married, so Old Mother Hubbard asked Jack Spratt over to call on her niece. Jack came dressed in his shinlest suit, and while the girl was up stairs primping in her "bestest" satin gown, Old Mother Hubbard, who had to talk until she came down, got confidential with Jack Spratt.

"Jack." she said, "she nearly drives me wild—I don't know how to cook for her. My empty cupboard is now full of lean meatlend altit things that have no fat in them. She will cat nothing the struck him.

My dear Mother Hubbard, I'll be glad to eat the lean part. Let me have it," said Jack. And as he said that a happy thought struck him.

Why not ask this girl who would eat no lean to be the wife of the man who would eat no fat. Why that would be a splendid idea. They were just made for each other, he was sure.

And that it what Jack Spratt did. He courted that fat niece of Old Mother Hubbard for several months and, one night he asked her to be Mrs. Spratt, and she said "yes"—for you see she didn't care how thin Jack was. Nobody ever before wanted her, and she was glad to have a nice home and plenty to eat—without be growled at for not eating the lean.

So all of Mother Goose Village turned out to the wedding of Jack Spratt and Mother Hubbard's niecs. Poor Jack looked like a shadow walking up the alse beside his buxom bride—but what cared he? He knew his worries were at an end, for he never again was scolded for not eating fat—and the platter was always licked clean, and there was no waste of anything. So they lived happily ever after.
