AMUSEMENTS

MAJESTIC This afternoon and night—"The Prince of Pilsen." Monday matinee and night—"Little Boy Blue." Tuesday matinee and night, September 22—"Bringing Up Father." Friday and Saturday, with daily matinee—Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival.

ORPHEUM Every afternoon and evening, high class vaudeville.

COLONIAL Daily continuous vaudeville and pictures.

"THE PRINCE OF PILSEN" "The Prince of Pilsen" is better known universally than any other musical product of American authors. It has been played in England, Scotland, Ireland, Canada, Australia, France, Germany, Hungary, Italy, Mexico and Brazil. Its only rival for international success is "The Belle of New York," but the latter piece was not seen in several of the foreign countries where "The Prince of Pilsen" enjoyed success. An enormous all-star revival, with John W. Ransome, the original creator of the part of Hans Wagner, in his old role, will be displayed at the Majestic this afternoon and night. The chorus, numbering thirty-seven alluring, fascinating, glorious young girls, will create a new standard of loveliness when they appear here. The special orchestra accompanying "The Prince of Pilsen" will be under the direction of Victor Clark. Advertisement.

"LITTLE BOY BLUE" The sale of seats for the engagement here of the famous Viennese musical comedy, "Little Boy Blue," opened yesterday at the Majestic. A strong company will present the piece here Monday with a bargain matinee. "Little Boy Blue" is now rated one of the standard musical comedies of the American stage. It ran for an entire season in New York city and enjoyed lengthy runs in Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston. The patronage promised by the sale indicates a capacity house. The coming season will not afford many musical comedies of the higher class and local theatergoers may be glad that this one is coming. There will be a specially augmented orchestra and the entire organization promises to be the best seen here in many seasons. Advertisement.

"BRINGING UP FATHER" Folks who like to be entertained in a manner befitting modern style of amusements will surely find more than their quota in the latest singing and dancing comedy, "Bringing Up Father," which will be the attraction at the Majestic Tuesday matinee and night. The new piece, which is in three acts, was suggested by the popular cartoons of George McManus. All the interesting features of the original pictures have been retained and other details added to help make one of the best productions of its kind fostered in many seasons. In handling the subject the authors have not deviated from the path of human nature. Advertisement.

HOWE'S TRAVEL FESTIVAL The great vogue and popularity of Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival, which comes to the Majestic next Friday and Saturday, with daily matinee, is due to the fact that the public has become more and more discriminating in the photographic quality of films as well as the subject matter. This same public realizes that in these respects Mr. Howe's exhibition meets the demands of the most critical and exacting and that it can always be depended upon to surpass the most sanguine expectations. In his entirely new program Mr. Howe promises one of the most delightful picture journeys he has ever presented. Advertisement.

ORPHEUM With the passing of the Orpheum's present show we will miss what patrons declared to be the best balanced bill of the season. Next week Jesse L. Lasky's newest creation called "A Garden of Peaches" will occupy the boards. This is another of those "girly" features with beautiful scenery, gorgeous costumes and clever comedians, the type of an act that always finds favor with local vaudeville devotees. The "Garden of Peaches" is so called because of the pretty girls in the production. Their tuneful songs and interesting thread of a story all take place in a realistic stage setting representing a peach orchard, so realistic indeed that the blossoms of the trees seem to send their fragrance across the footlights. Of the cast of beauties involved, Miss Minerva Covardale, who won much popularity here in other Lasky attractions, is the leading "peach." She will have as her partner, Larry Cobaltos, a natty comedian and clever dancer. And by the way we want to miss these two artists' execution of the Fox Trot, which they do during the action of the piece. Some of the song hits that will be heard about seven o'clock after the act has appeared for several performances include "I Want To Linger," "Still We Must Arise," "Rather Be a Peach on Broadway," "Where the Peaches Grow." The gowns will be the season's latest fads made of gorgeous materials. Advertisement.

COLONIAL Esau, the monkey with the human brain, will undoubtedly prove a big drawing card for the kiddies at the Colonial Theater this afternoon. Esau just arrived from Europe afraid he would stop some stray bullet over there, so he's spending the last three days of his first week's visit to America, very prominently at the Colonial. He does everything but talk and is delighting audiences immensely. There's a clever team of comedians on the same offering, and also a neat song and patter duo. The fine George Kleine feature in six acts, "Between the Savage and the Tiger" is certainly a worthy attraction. It will be presented for the last time today. For Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week the management is announcing Henworth's pictorial revival of "The Old Curiosity Shop" by Charles Dickens. The feature is in five parts, an unexcelled acting and photography. Advertisement.

Give Your Boys and Girls a Chance! GET THEM Larned's Great History of the World NOW OFFERED ALMOST AS A GIFT BY THE HARRISBURG TELEGRAPH TO ITS READERS

The Battle that Put the United States on the Map is Illustrated in Larned's History by a Full-Page Reproduction of a Great Historical Painting: "THE BATTLE OF TEUTOBERGER FOREST"

Augustus Caesar sent one day three legions of his veterans under Quintilius Varus into Teuton Land. "Go, scourge me those yellow-bearded barbarians!" he cried; "Come back a conqueror, or show me never your face again!" So forth fared Roman Varus into deep and narrow valleys, through dark and fearsome woods, o'er steep and rugged mountains traversed by icy torrents till he came to the dark shadows of the Teutoberger Wald. Deep within the forest waited him young Hermann, chief of the Cheruscan Saxons, who, when that morning sun's first rays gilded the glittering lances and flashing armor of the Roman soldiery, kissed farewell his bride, sweet-lipped Thusnelda—and went his way into that day's fierce fighting. Farther and farther into the wilderness of giant trees, with their gnarled and knotted trunks, marching beneath thick shade of leaf and intertwisted limb, wound the sinuous army of Varus, like some huge Midgard Serpent, slithering along in quest of prey. And now came swamps and marshes, sunken and sodden with flood-time waters to stop the march of men weighted with weapons and heavy armor. Nor could they go to right or left, for that there came such blinding showers of spear and dart, and fiendish faces all set with flaming beards and savage eyes that glowed with hate. And then passed word from rank to rank that all the wild barbaric host were in their rear, hacking and hewing and cutting like demons; and that none escaped. Came a little island once more with firm footing and fast, and here huddled together the Roman legionaries and made last stand—all armed with helmet, cuirass, greave and shield. In vain they hurled their heavy javelins; futile and of no use their short sharp swords. And when at last the angry Teuton gods opened the very gates of heaven and downpoured the waters of their wrath upon the invading host—they could make no more fight. And now was heard the ringing Saxon shout through the forest gloom. Fierce Hermann pressed through the fray into its thick and cheered his comrades on, and bade them to the finish. Then Varus strove no more. Bleeding with many wounds, anguished still greater with defeat of shame, he fell upon his sword, and his ghost passed on. And when the news came to Rome, as in good time it did, Augustus Caesar, in grief and great despair, cried out: "O Varus, Varus, give me back my legions!" And had brave Hermann not won the fight in Teutoberger Forest that fearful day, there would have been no England—not even the name—and we English and Americans upon whose people and whose tongue there is no sun that sets—of all our hundred-millions could not now count one living soul.
