comedy entitled "Miss Tobasco," in which Miss Eva Tanguay, the wellknown star of vaudeville and musical comedy, will play the title role. This is a piece that Miss Tanguay, imported from Paris for her own use and she is the owner and manager of the production and company as well as its star.
With music interpolated especially for her, Miss Tanguay injects her specialties into the play. Seats for this performance will go on sale Friday. — Advertisement.

ORPHEUM

Gladys Clark and Henry Bergman, the couple who charmed us on two different occasions at the Orpheum Theater in Jesse Lasky's "Trained Nurses," burst on our vision at that theater to day, giving Harrisburgers the very first opportunity to see them in their newest production, "The Society Buds." This is another Lasky act, new and beautiful, declared by the few vaude-ville managers who viewed it, to be the finest attraction Mr. Lasky ever presented in vaudeville, Of course, the clever stars of the piece are what will please theatergoers most, especially before they have had an opportunity to see the new act. But the opportunity of the clever stars of the piece are what will please theatergoers most, especially before they have had an opportunity of the clever stars of the piece are what will glean from the first startest when the startest the startest will be a seen the startest the startest and the startest from a "sight" standpoint. The story and music for "The Society Buds" was written by the same writers of "Red Heads" and the "Trained Nurses," William LeBarron and Robert Hood Bowers, respectively, and it is said to be even more fascinating and catchy than either of these. During the action of the piece Miss Clark and Mr. Bergman will sing the two songs that were especially written for them by Irving Berlin, entitled "Furnishing a Home For Iwo and "My Idea of Paradise," belaylet bright, The stage tetting is assinged after the stage tetting in fashioned afte

"The Lion of Venlee," a marvelous George Kleine moving picture feature, will be the reigning attraction for the first half of the week at the Colonial Theater. All the action of the piece takts place in Venice, calling in marvelous scenery, and strange to say not one foot of the whole six reels shows a street, all of the scenes being the interesting canals. It calls in a marvelous battle at sea, tells a beautiful romance, and scenically it is said to be alone worth the time and price. The vaudeville acts for the first half of the week will be led off by six minstref men, doing a regulation minstref first part, of gass and songs; there will also centertainers, as well as less furtle and her wonderful group of trained birds.—Advertisement.

Rose ashore, leaving Barcus on guard. Alan runs up the beach, and finds a small fishing village with a rallroad station. The agent and telegraph operator are about to shut up for the night. There is one other man in the station—the sinuggler messenger, who has brought Judith's telegram to her father. He recognizes Alan, but keeps out of sight. Alan asks for trains, and is informed that none leave till morning. Alan sends a telegram to Digby asking to arrange for a special train to await him at Providence and a motor car on the waterfront at New Bedford. With Barcus, gets Rose to the hotel. He then goes out to charter a fast power-boat. The proprietor of the hotel het are talking, Alan sees a rocket go up from the highest point in the vicinity and asks the meaning of it. He can get no explanation, and suspects that it is a signal to Judith and her gang from their allies.

Judith, on the schooner, sples the rocket going up on the mainland. The smuggler captain agrees with her interpretation of the signal and crowds on sali.

Alan laarm, calls Barcus and tells his suspicions. They rush to the wharf. Barcus grabs Alan and hurries him to the motor car. On the way they are halted by a policeman, who grabs Barcus. The latter goes to the mat with the cop, shouting to Alan to go on. Alan's, He arrives gust in time to rescul Judith. On Friday night the elder Brumbaugh attracted much attention among the people who attended the Republican gathering and talked with interest of his son. Incidentally, he said that the youth of Dr. Brumbaugh was marked by a shyness that was astonishing. He said "When Martin was a boy he was bashful, as a student at Juniata College. I told him to keep in touch with his teachers, to be at hand when some one was needed quickly, and then I said, you will be at the hub of the wheel. You will be on the spot. That is what Martin did. They had him ring the college bell, and he swept the halls for them. Later, when there was a vacant class to be heard, they called on Martin to fill the place, and he did it as well as he could.
