Pure food authorities of highest degree testify to the merits of oleomargarine. The following quotations are typical:

- "Perfectly pure, wholesome and palatable."—Prof. J. W. L. Arnold, professor of Physiology, University of New York.
- "Contains essentially the same ingredients as butter made from cow's milk."—Prof. W. U. Atwater, director U. S. Agricultural Experiment Station.
- "It is free from all objections. There are a large number who imagine oleomargarine is made from any old scraps of grease, regardless of age or cleanliness. The reverse is the fact. Good oleo can be had only by employing the very best and freshest of fat."—Dr. A. G. Stockwell in Scientific American.
- "Essentially identical with best fresh butter and superior to much of the butter made from cream alone."—Prof. Henry Morton, Stephens Institute of Technology.
- "For all ordinary and culinary purposes, the full equivalent of good butter made from cream."—Prof. S. W. Johnson, professor of Agricultural Chemistry, Yale College.
- "It is made only from the cleanest materials in the cleanest possible manner. Oleomargarine cannot be made from rancid fat."—Dr. Charles Harrington, Prof. of Hygiene, Harvard Medical School.

The Last Shot

By FREDERICK PALMER

(Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons)

After a long intermission came another outbreak from Dellarme's men, which she interpreted as the response to another rush by the Grays; and this yelping of the demon was not that of the hound after the hare, as in the valley, but of the hare with his back to the wall. When it was over there was no cheer. What did this mean? Without warning to her mother she bolted out of the kitchen. Mrs. Galland sprang up to follow, but Minna barred the way.

"One is enough!" she said firmly, and Mrs. Galland dropped back into her chair.

In the front rooms Marta found havoc beyond her imagination. A portion of the ceiling had been blown out by a shell entering at an up-stairs window; the hardwood floors were littered with plaster and window-glass and ripped into splinters in places.

But she hurried on, impelled by she knew not what, through the dining-room, and, on the veranda, stopped short, with starting eyes and a cry of grievous shock. Two of his men were carrying Dellarme back from the breastwork, where they had caught him in their arms as he fell. They laid him gently on the sward with a knapsack under his head. His face grew whiter with the flow of blood from the red hole in the right breast of his blouse. Then he opened his lips and whispered to the doctor: "How is it?" Something in his eyes, in the tone of that faint question, required the grace of a soldier's truth in answer.

"Bad!" said the doctor.

"Then, good-by!" And his head fell to one side, his lips set in his cheery smile.

His company was a company with his smile out of its heart and in its place blank despair. Many of the men had stopped firing. Some had even run back to look at him and stood, caps off, backs to the enemy, miserable in their grief. Others leaned against the parapet, rifle out of hand, staring and dazed.

"They have killed our captain!"

"They've killed our captain!"—still a captain to them. A general's stars could not have raised him a cubit in their estimation.

"And once we called him 'Baby Dellarme,' he was so young and bashful! Him a baby? He was a king!"

"Men, get to your places!" cried the surviving lieutenant rather hopelessly, with no Dellarme to show him what to do; and Marta saw that few paid any attention to him.

In that minute of demoralization the Grays had their chance, but only for a minute. A voice that seemed to speak some uncontrollable thought of her own broke in, and it rang with the authority and leadership of a mature officer's command, even though coming from a gardener in blue blouse and crownless straw hat.

"Your rifles, your rifles, quick!" called Feller. "We're only beginning to fight!"

And then another voice in a bull roar, Strankey's:

"Avenge his death! They've got to kill the last man of you for killing him! Revenge! Revenge!"

That cry brought back to the company all the fighting spirit of the cheery smile and with it another spirit—for Dellarme's sake!—which he had never taught them.

Strankey picked up one of several cylindrical objects that were lying at his feet.

"He wouldn't use this—he was too soft-hearted—but I will!" he cried, and dug a hand-grenade, and then a second, over the breastwork. The explosions were followed by agonized groans from the Grays hugging the lower side of the terrace. For this they had crawled across the road in the night—to find themselves unable to move either way and directly under the flashes of the Browns' rifles.

"You engineers, make ready!"

"Hand-grenades to the men under the trees! That's where they're going to try for it—no wall to climb over there!"

FLY CONTEST NETS

THOUSANDS OF PESTS

Civic Club's Efforts to Rid City of Disease Spreader Brings Results

WINNING FLY TRAP

This is a picture of a homemade fly trap with which the Civic Club fly contest prize was won. It is 18 by 30 inches high; takes two 14-inch barrel hoops for the sides of the cylinder which is made of 30-inch fly wire, 62 inches long. The cone requires a piece of fly wire, 19 by 38 inches, cutting a circular edge with a 19-inch radius and tacking the circular edge to the inside of one of the 18-inch barrel hoops. The open end of the cylinder is closed with a barrel stave and secured with a screw. A strip of wood, the trap is then covered with cheese cloth and held in position with a third barrel hoop. The trap is stayed with three barrel staves and raised from the ground with three short legs.

By MABEL CRONISE JONES

The Harrisburg Civic Club has every reason to be proud of its fly-swating campaign that ended on Saturday.

Many New England cities, Cleveland, Washington, D. C., many towns and villages in the West, as well as various other places, have had similar campaigns that have been run either by the municipal government itself or by the municipality in conjunction with some women's club. Such contests have, of course, been able to offer large prizes, some being as high as $250 for the largest number of dead flies turned in. And such contests have aroused the attention of many college students who have taken part in the fray. So far as can be learned, however, from a rather extensive search, no other city has had a local contest just ended netted greater results than any other similar campaign conducted solely by a woman's club.

Between 700 and 800 pints of dead flies were taken to the committee for measurement, or a total of 5,651,000 flies. Had they been allowed to live they would have been the progenitors during this present season alone of 6,663,805,870,000 house flies—enough to keep every household busy. Then, too, every one of those quadrillions of flies would have laid eggs and such a number of several hundred that would have hatched out early next Spring. The increase would have gone on in geometrical ratio and the number by the end of the year would have been too huge to grapple with.

Winner Has 181 Pints

Harry Lowe Stigmund, who won the first prize, is only 3 years old, but he was anxious to have a bicycle so that he got into the contests to some purpose. He brought in 181 pints of flies, a two-and-a-half dollar prize, in any one contestant, though he expects to have more next year if such a thing is possible. While Harry lives in Camp Hill, his flies were strictly from the city. He went to the outside butchering places and similar spots that are apt to attract the pests. He followed the directions of one of the experts on the subject who advises the placing of traps outside of houses and stores so that the breeding places may be denuded. Harry's trap was homemade, costing just 40 cents, and was baited with decaying matter.

Other successful competitors were Mary Blair, 321 Hamilton street, 82 pints, and it looked for a while on the Capital street, 61 pints; William Reichert, 517 Woodbine, 61 pints. These were the prize winners, the first prize being a five-dollar gold piece; the second, a two-and-a-half dollar gold piece; there were also three one-dollar prizes.

Contestants Do Good Work

Many of the other contestants did remarkably well and in any other contest would have borne off a prize. All of the young people received, of course, 5 cents a pint for their flies, aside from the prizes awarded, so that the first prize winner came in for something more than $14.

Harry Kreich, who won the first prize a year ago, had 53 pints this time and had good reason to expect a prize, but there were so many ahead of him that he only won his 5-cent-a-pint money. Elsie Frederichson, who was also a prize winner once with 28 pints, presented 23 pints this time; but while her 28 pints was sufficient once to win her first prize, her 23 pints this time did not win any. Of course, there were many who had only a few pints, but as there are 7,000 flies to the pint, even those who presented but one pint did well for the city.

Among the others who turned in a goodly number of pints were: Marshall Houz, 629 North Sixth street, 50 pints; Mildred Emors, 416 Seneca, 35 pints; Allen Collier, Tenth and State streets, 35 pints; Marie Rodenhaver, 1205 Balley, 31 pints. Honors were about evenly distributed between the boys and girls.

The chairman of the publicity work said to-day: "Of course, we could never have secured such satisfactory results without the co-operation of the local press. It aided us magnificently, so that our thanks are primarily due to the newspapers."

EMPEROR IN EAST PRUSSIA

London, Sept. 28, 4:53 A. M.—Many if not a majority of the German troops concentrated on the Russian frontier, says the Petrograd correspondent of the Times, "are old corps, while the remaining armies in France and Belgium are mainly composed of reserve corps. Moreover, it is beyond doubt that the Emperor himself is in East Prussia."

WAIT PRAYER SERVICE

THOUSAND HOMES

Stough Bulletin Explains Financial Plan of the Stough Campaign Committee

The Stough Campaign Bulletin of yesterday's date gives interesting statistics regarding the neighborhood prayer service being held throughout the city and presented on Friday evenings in connection with the preliminary work of the campaign. The Bulletin says:

"Does prayer count? Every section of the community, prayer meeting and every church in Harrisburg and vicinity has felt the influence of the prayer meetings being conducted in private homes every Tuesday and Friday evening. The official details of the first two weeks were as follows:

Date	Meetings	Attendees	Prayers
September 8	167	1,576	684
September 11	175	1,701	701
September 15	198	2,852	862
September 18	203	2,569	851

In regard to financing the campaign the Bulletin says:

"Probably no question is looming so large in the minds of many people, both Christians and non-Christians, as the question of financing the evangelistic campaign now on, which will culminate in the tabernacle services starting November 1. The conditions upon which Dr. Stough enters any field are a big factor in making such campaigns practically possible. Dr. Stough comes here in November absolutely without a guarantee of a single dollar in the way of personal remuneration. The agreement entered into by the committee is that the last Sunday of the campaign shall be set aside for a free will offering by the people of Harrisburg and vicinity to Dr. Stough and his family. Dr. Stough, out of this Dr. Stough pays a portion of the salaries and other expenses of his assistants.

"The ordinary expenses, such as printing, advertising, plans, office rent, help, etc., are met out of a preliminary fund of $1,000 which has already been partly contributed by voluntary gifts from the members of the co-operating churches.

Movies at Fifth Street.—A moving picture entertainment will be given at the Fifth Street Methodist Church, Fifth and Granite streets, this evening. The movies will be shown in the social room of the building.

The Men's Club will hold a music festival Tuesday, October 20.

United Brethren at Conference.—The East Pennsylvania Conference of the United Brethren Church, including the territory between the Susquehanna river and Philadelphia, will be convened in the Philadelphia United Brethren Church Tuesday and will continue throughout the week. The Rev. J. C. Lowrey, of Sixteenth and Derry streets, presiding elder of the conference, will have charge of the business sessions. The Rev. J. A. Lyter, D. D., pastor of Ferry Street United Brethren Church, Fifteenth and Derry streets, is the secretary of the conference, and these men, together with the other clerical and lay delegates of the conference, will go to Philadelphia to-night or to-morrow.

This is the first time the conference ever met in Philadelphia.

1,800 Attend 6 Stough Sunday Mass Meetings

Nearly 1,800 people attended the half-dozen simultaneous mass meetings in the city and neighborhood yesterday in the interest of the Stough evangelistic campaign. Sixteen speakers at the different meetings were:

Hoopes, Berwick, chairman of woman's work committee; State Street United Brethren, J. R. Shippe, Sunbury; Steelton Methodist Church, William F. Keefe. Largely attended meetings were also held at Enola and Penbrook.

SAYS COL. OTT DOES WELL IN THE TANGO

Army Officer's Statement to Court in Asking for Continuance; Mr. Ott Admits It

Lieutenant Colonel Fred M. Ott, County Solicitor, is an adept at the tango. So the Dauphin County Court was informed this morning by Attorney John Fox Weiss in asking for the continuance of a common pleas case. Furthermore, the military lawyer modestly admitted it.

Mr. Weiss gravely referred to the County Solicitor's tango-chorean ability in asking for the continuance of an assumpt suit between the Nye & Tewick Company, against the J. C. Ewing Underwear Company. This would have been scheduled for Thursday of next week.

"On that day," said Mr. Weiss, "140 bands will gladden the air with sweet music and Mr. Ott and I are not certain that our attention will not be distracted."

"Wouldn't the music be an inspiration?" inquired Judge McCarrel.

"To tango, Your Honor," sprightly responded Mr. Weiss, "at which, I understand, he added, 'Colonel Ott is an adept.'"

"That," nodded Solicitor Ott, "is true."

In all fourteen of the thirty cases listed weaver continued.

Speece, will sell at public sale a farm of 212 acres and the stock on the farm. The auction will begin at 1:30 o'clock, October 28. The farm is located about twelve miles north of Harrisburg. C. C. Stroh is the attorney for the executors.

Open Bids For Sewers.—Bids for the construction of sewers in Maclay street from Paxton creek eastwardly and in South Second street from Hoag street westwardly, will be opened by Commissioner Lynch. The Central Construction and Supply will be the first named job with $290. On the other hand, the Central Construction and Supply, their figures, respectively, being $887 and $872.60.
