WHAT CAN THE STRANGER SEE WHILE IN HARRISBURG?

Capitol, River Front, Fort Washington, Parks, Auto and Trolley Rides are Points of Interest.

WHAT TO SEE IN HARRISBURG

By George F. Ross

To the stranger within our gates a directory of the points of interest in this city and its environs may be helpful in indicating their locality and the most accessible routes by which they can be reached.

It goes without saying that visitors on sightseeing bent will first wish to make a tour of the magnificent State Capitol building. Its location is within easy walking distance from all the railroad stations, and it stands out so conspicuously that no explicit directions for reaching it are necessary.

From the Capitol a stroll is suggested down West State street, the broad avenue that will be observed from the main entrance to the Capitol. The Masonic Temple, Grace Methodist Church, the Cathedral, and the monument erected by Dauphin county to the soldiers and sailors of the Civil War will be passed enroute to Front street, where a stretch of magnificent scenery will charm the beholder. The River Park, the broad Susquehanna, its bosom dotted with many picturesque islands, the blue mountains in the distance, and the farms and villages on the opposite shore combine to make a picture that Harrisburg prizes as one of its most valued assets.

The River Front Incidentally we notice that our River Front, unlike other cities having a water front, has not been given over to industrial establishments, but continues to be "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." At the corner of Front and North streets the city water works are located, and on the large island opposite the central portion of the city the filtration plant performs its work so admirably that it is considered to be one of the best in the country. Officials from other municipalities have visited it from time to time and its inspection by them has called forth their highest commendation. Adjoining the filtration plant on the east are the grounds of the Harrisburg Athletic Association, while the city playgrounds occupy the lower end of the island. These can be reached by either the Walnut or Market street bridges.

As one strolls down Front street many handsome residences are passed, among which is a historic building at the corner of Front and South streets. This building was erected for William Maclay, the first United States Senator from this State and was occupied by him in the early days of this city. It is constructed of limestone and the original edifice has in recent years, been greatly enlarged, but happily the style of architecture and the character of the materials used in the addition correspond with what was "The Old Maclay Mansion." It is now the home of William Elder Bailey. But a short distance below, the Executive Mansion will be seen, and the coat of arms chiseled on its brownstone front will assist in its identification. A little over two blocks from this point, at the corner of Front and Walnut streets, the new public library is located, and one block farther down Market street will be reached, the principal business thoroughfare of the city. Here a steel bridge spans the river, one that a few years since supplanted what was familiarly known as the "camel-back" bridge because of its peculiar construction. When Charles Dickens visited this country in 1842 he crossed that bridge, riding on the top of a stage coach, and he has described it in his inimitable fashion in "American Notes." The two columns standing at the entrance to the bridge were formerly part of the historic State Capitol building which was destroyed by fire February 2, 1897. The bronzes on the pedestals of the columns picture the old Capitol and the "camel-back" bridge, and are worthy of notice.

"Fort Washington"

At this point attention is directed to a high bluff on the opposite side of the river. In the Spring of 1863 the Confederate Army invaded Pennsylvania, and the capture or destruction of Harrisburg was threatened, the skirmishers of the enemy having reached a point but three miles distant from the city. Troops were hastily concentrated on this bluff and a line of intrenchments thrown up, in the construction of which many citizens of this city volunteered their assistance on a memorable Sabbath day. On these breastworks cannon were mounted and the name of "Fort Washington" was given to the site, a name that still clings to it. After the flight of over fifty years these intrenchments are still in evidence and are a silent reminder of the stirring days of the Civil War. This fort may well be designated as the high water mark of that great conflict, for General Lee withdrew his army from this vicinity and concentrated it at Gettysburg, where the memorable battle was fought in the first week of July, 1863.

Two blocks from this point the Harrisburg hospital is located and here the river is again spanned by a steel railroad bridge, which is used jointly by the Cumberland Valley railroad and the Northern Central railroad. Passing through a subway recently constructed and walking a short distance down Front street a large stone residence looms up. This building was erected in 1766 by John Harris, the founder of the city. For many years it was the home of General Simon Cameron, who was President Lincoln's first Secretary of War, and also a noted States Senator from Pennsylvania for almost fifteen years. It is now the home of his daughter, Mrs. Richard J. Haldeman. Immediately opposite in the River Park is the grave of John Harris, the father of the founder of the city.

See Mulberry St. Bridge

The visitor should not fail to see one of the municipal features of which we are justly proud, namely, the Mulberry street viaduct, which is accessible from the center of the city. It is constructed of reinforced concrete and its architectural design and magnitude excites the admiration of all. It cost in round figures $250,000. Thus far I have directed the visitor only to points that are within walking distance, and I will devote the balance of this paper to such places of interest as will necessitate the use of the trolley car or some other mode of conveyance to the end that they may be comfortably reached.

Reservoir Park, containing 88 acres, is most beautifully situated, and may be quickly reached by trolley car from Market Square, cars marked "Reservoir Park" leaving the Square at frequent intervals. This park derives its name from the fact that the city reservoirs are located there. From its elevation a scene of surpassing beauty can be witnessed, embracing the city and its environment of hamlets, river, mountains and fertile farms. Looking to the west, the gap in the mountains through which the majestic Susquehanna winds its way can be seen, and on days when the atmospheric conditions are favorable, the trains of the Pennsylvania railroad are discernible crossing the great stone arch bridge spanning the river at Rockville, five miles away. This structure is well worth visiting. Trolley cars marked "Rockville" leave the Square every twenty minutes and will convey one to this wonderful product of engineering design and mechanical skill.

Wildwood

"Wildwood" is another of our parks and lies to the north of the city. It contains 542 acres. This park fairly riots in wild flowers in the early Spring and summer of great variety and beauty, and abounds in picturesque scenery. Within its confines a lake of considerable size affords an opportunity for boating in the summer and skating in the winter. It can be reached by the Rockville cars, but the better way, owing to its distance from the city, is by automobile.

In conclusion let me suggest an automobile ride over the following route, which I am confident will be most satisfying: Starting from Market Square, proceed down Market street to Fourth street, thence over the Mulberry street viaduct to Cameron street, thence through the Cameron parkway, thence via Derry street and Eighteenth street to Reservoir Park, through the park, thence via East State street to Fourth and Sixth streets, to Maclay street, through Wildwood Park and thence to Riverside Drive, a combination of State highway and splendidly paved street, passing many beautiful homes in a setting of attractive lawns. The trolley system affords an opportunity for visiting all parts of the city and the surrounding country. A ride into the Cumberland and Lebanon

"THE MORE CIVILIZED"

People become the more consideration they give to their surroundings when they are eating." When you are not among the refinements of your own home you will find Menger's Restaurant a neat, refined place in which to eat your meals. Best market affords prepared under the personal supervision of Mrs. Menger, clean nappery and homelike in its appointments. 110 North Second street.

Valleys, famous for their splendid and fertile farms, and to Enola several miles up the opposite side of the river, where the extensive freight classification yards of the Pennsylvania railroad are located, will fully repay one.

Shooting Corn Pains Fade In An Hour.

Think of the marvel of it, that stinging, burning pain made to go like magic. That's how Putnam's Extractor works. It's made to go right for corns, to root them out, to destroy their pain, to keep callouses, sore foot lumps and the like off the human foot. No remedy quicker, safer, or so painless and dependable. You can absolutely rely on Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, about 50 years in use, sold everywhere in 25c bottles, and by C. M. Forney.—Advertisement.
