"If Everyoman be lead by Truth, she will surely waken love." Such is the lesson taught by "Everyoman," is the will surely waken love." Such is the lesson taught by "Everyoman," morality atmosphere of the "miracle play"; the chorus of the comic opera; the gay New Year scene on Broadway; the "home" atmosphere; behind the scenes of the stage; the symphony orchestra; the "ballad" of Conscience; the lighter music of to-day as well as the "character music"—all go to make up Everywoman. And through it all the forceful truths of genuine love. Everywoman has two messages for its audiences. For Everywoman searching for love, there is a kindly warning that "love is ever born of truth." For everymonan there is the admonition of Nobody in the epilogue,

"Be just, be fair,
To Everywoman, everywhere, Her faults are many,
Nobody's the blame."
Everywoman was presented by the only company now playing the show. Miss Alice Baxter was seen in the title role, and her work might be fairly characterized as all that one could desire. But'it would be unfair to stop there, for Miss Baxter was supported by a cast that was perfectly balanced. Every character, symbolical of something, had to play his part on that plane which the tenor of the play demanded. And one of the most pleasurable features of the performance was that every character played his part with that accuracy of demanded symbolism as to present a perfectly rounded production. To discriminate is impossible; but one cannot refrain from remarking upon the voice of Conscience (Norma Hark). Small and sweet and of charming purity, Miss Hark's voice admirably fitted the part for which she was cast. Nobody who "bared the pitfalls" of Everywoman to the audience was especially written for Everywoman by George Whitefield Chadwick. The music is largely symbolical, giving almost every character a motif which is introduced at the various 'ntervals when that character appears. The orchestra under Mr. Rycroft's direction was a delight.

Everywoman teaches us a great lesson, whether it was or was not written for that purpose. And it affords entertainment as well. One feels no hesitancy in saying that Everywoman is a show which, after it is over, might be immediately hesitants, and the head of the

"SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE"

"Seven Keys to Baldpate," which comes to the Majestic Theater. Saturday, matinee and night, ranks as the biggest success George M Cohan has ever staged, and about the funniest. There is a laugh a minute in it, and a strain of mystery that keeps the audience at high tension from beginning to end. Never before has there been such a combination of humor and mystery. The play is taken from the famous comedy novely by Earl Derr Biggers. Cohan has taken it in hand and made a play such as the American stage has never heritore witnessed. Those who have read the story will appreciate it even more. Cohans advice is to read the story will appreciate it even more. Ohans advice is to read the spay. Even methers of the cast has been personally selected by Mr. Cohan.—Advertisement.

WHAT DO YOU CALL YOUR DOS. BOWERS?

Low Down Trick Played on Very Important Actor on the Orpheum Bill

Someone played it rawther low own, doncha know, on a very im-ortant actor in this week's Orpheum whether is was the fault of printer,

Whether is was the fault of printer, house management or proprietor of the sketch is neither here nor there. Nor is the motive, be it professional jealousy or mere thoughtlessness. The slaring fact remains that the name of one of the principals of Frederick V. Bowers and company doesn't appear on the program.

So, unless the Orpheum's press agent, or perhaps Mr. Bowers himself, comes to the rescue a whole lot of folks who will go to the vaudeville house this week will never, never know what to call that character of obviously and deucedly English extraction who slouches to the footlights now and then. He carries a much-college curved briar pipe in his mouth and wears a jockey cap and an air of boredom that perhaps isn't so hard to understand after all. What DO you call your buildog, Mr. Bowers? Or does he come without calling?

As usual the other members of the Bowers company made a hit, including Mr. Bowers, who sings in his old-time style. Ada Ripel (that's the Bowers company made a hit, including same, isn't, Mr. Bowers?) is attractive in a way that grows upon one. One sees more of her, too, every time she comes out. So by the time for the final curtain one can wholly appreciate her charm. Ada makes her last bow in a suit of dark drings and-so-forth—with and-so-forth predominating.

The real favorites this week, judgco-forth—with and-so-forth predominating.

The real favorites this week, judging from the first-night reception, are bound to be Pauli and Boyne, who sing and darce, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Cappelen in a laughable domestic comedy called "Hiring a Maid." Pretty Pauli alone makes the act well worth while. Some food for thought as well as laughter is dished up in the playlet offered by Mr. Cappelen and his very pretty partner.

Then there is the Bison City Four—a quartet of singers of vocal ability too well known to Orpheumites to require much comment. Suffice it to say that they sing just as well as ever. And that businesslike slap on the face of the cop and the tramp, and similar slap-stick stuff always tickles an Orpheum crowd.

But to hurry along. The Novelty Clintons offer real entertainment in a tumbling-jumping act; the "mystic bird." a canary which answers readily Clintons offer real entertainment in a tumbling-jumping act; the "mystic bird," a canary which answers readily to all sorts of bird-calls as tried on the violin and which interested many, and the Nelson and Whalen troupe of hoop rollers complete an attractive bill for a world's series week.
