HILL BOY GETS WAR NEWS AHEAD OF THE CITY NEWSPAPERS

structions, he cannot, under any circumstances, tell it. Sayville, Long Island, the headquarters of the Associated Press wireless station, receives all the news of the war soon after it happens, and Mr. Knight, who has the best wireless station in this section of the State, gets all the news from the Sayville station daily. Mr. Knight's station is the most efficient and best equipped one around these parts. It is entirely home-made, but with it he can receive messages from distances up to 4,000 miles. He can also send messages over 100 miles. In his wireless set he has several instruments built according to his own ideas.

ton, Va., is the best station in the world, but Wanamaker's and the Philadelphia Navy Yard stations are the only two near here that are better than Mr. Knight's.

He has been in the amateur wireless game for the last nine years, being the first person in this city to obtain a government license. Mr. Knight is a student of the Technical High School and is an active member of the Wireless Club at that institution.

He says anyone is welcome to come to his home at any time to see his instruments work and he will gladly explain all he knows about wireless and answer any questions that will be asked. He has had many visitors and all of them say that he has a fine and efficient set. His station has been inspected by the Firemen Underwriters' Association and was pronounced safe. Mr. Knight says: "Many people think that a wireless station is dangerous to a community because it attracts lightning. This, in fact, is just the opposite. My station has been struck at least four times by lightning, and if it had not been here in all probability the lightning would have struck the houses in this neighborhood, causing a lot of trouble. With the exception of the spark-gap, through which over 60,000 volts of electricity pass when a message is being sent, there is nothing at all dangerous about a wireless station."

A Series of Marvelous Illustrations That Accompany Larned's Great History of the World

The illustrations that accompany Larned's History of the World, present probably the feature that will quickest attract the attention and hold it. As wonderful and praiseworthy as the work is from a literary standpoint, it is not less worthy of commendation from an artistic point of view. Not one of the illustrations has been selected merely as an interesting or attractive picture. Each of the more than 150 has been chosen to illustrate the text, to make it more emphatic, and to make the narrative more clear and realistic. The portraits are authentic; the battle scenes and world famous events depicted in colors and half-tones are reproduced from the greatest art galleries of the world. Some of the originals were sold at fabulous figures and held prices less-to-day. They will bear the test of the most critical examination of art connoisseurs. This is one of the features that puts Larned's History far above any similar work ever offered. Our readers are fortunate in being able to own these five great volumes almost as a gift. Parachute Man Has Thrilling Descent at Hagerstown Fair

Special to The Telegraph
Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 15. — Yesterday the unexpected happened when rain descended like a pall upon the big Hagerstown fair, blighting the receipts and reducing the attendance to the lowest for Wednesday of any exhibition in years. For eight years the fair has had a splendid run of weather, there not being a rainy day in all of that time. The receipts for the first day of the fair were $3,317.30, about $65 in excess of the receipts for the same day last year.

Sheriff O. W. King and a squad of officers made a raid on the fair grounds at night and arrested forty men on the charge of vagrancy. The men were from all sections of the country, several giving their homes in Harrisburg. They were found sleeping in stables.

Johnny Mack, an aeronaut, made a thrilling descent with two parachutes from a balloon sent up at the fair grounds. Mack cut loose from the balloon while it was passing over the city and landed on the roof of the residence of Dr. D. Elmer Fahrney, who assisted the aeronaut through an iron grating. Mack was not injured.

All of the racing events were pulled off on the opening day, there being two bad spills in the first heat of the 220 paces event. The racing yesterday was affected by the rain. Mrs. L. R. Wolf, of Harrisburg, has the racing program privilege at the fair. Mrs. Wolf is an enthusiastic horse woman.
