chosen for the four-year term, and that councilmen may succeed themselves.

Imposing license tax not exceeding $100 on lawyers, physicians, and other professional men, trading stamp, warehouse and storage, markethouse and garage companies and owners.

Revision generally of so-called "welfare" section which governs all ordinances pertaining to the government of the municipality.

Authorizing legislation relative taxation and appropriation for maintenance of playgrounds.

Substitution of 90-day instead of 30-day maximum prison penalty for violators of city ordinances.

Making it bribery to influence or try to influence any city official or employ in addition to councilmen in the performance of their duties.

Changing of time for collection city taxes.

Requiring three votes to pass legislation in council.

Fixing tenure of city engineer and city solicitor at four years.

Re-drafting of the referendum.

The Committee Busy

The special committee consisting of the mayors and city solicitors of several of Pennsylvania's important cities met all afternoon in the council chamber and then returned after dinner for a "continued session." The various changes suggested will be embodied in resolutions for amendment or perhaps in new bills which will be submitted for approval to the League of Third Class Cities in December. The threatened legislation then will be submitted to the State Assembly at its meeting in January.

The committee included the following: James A. Gardner, city solicitor, New Castle, chairman; J. L. Rouse, city solicitor, York, secretary; Mayors William J. Stern, Erie; John K. Royal, city; Ira W. Stratton, Reading; Superintendent of Finance and Accounts J. P. Stouch and R. Nelson Bennett, Altoona and Wilkes-Barre, respectively; and City Solicitor Daniel S. Seitz, city; C. F. McHugh, Wilkes-Barre; E. F. Genchener, Pottsville; C. C. Sawyer, Johnstown; F. P. Cummings, Williamsport; W. E. Newlin, McKeesport; H. P. Keiser, Lebanon; A. A. Cochran, Chester; F. P. Schoonmaker, Bradford, and City Clerk Charles A. Miller, city.

Now Comes "The Round Up" Spectacular Western Play

The Round Up opens an engagement of two nights, Monday and Tuesday, with a special popular priced magazine Tuesday at the Majestic Theater. The play is by Edmund Day, is elaborately staged and presented by a capable company conspicuous among whom is Shep Camp in the role of "Slim" Hoover. As a new character from the wild and woolly west, "Slim" is most entertaining. His original humor gives the play the necessary comedy and keeps the audience good natured. "The Round Up" which is a thrilling story of life in the great ranges of Arizona, is told with the aid of electrical effects, splendid scenery, an unusually large cast and a number of bronchos. There are two love stories which run through the play to keep up the heart interest, and these are cleverly balanced by the comedy work of the sheriff and plenty of excitement is furnished by the cowpunchers. The third act is especially strong, from a spectacular point of view. The twenty mounted Indians coming down the mountain trail is picturesque and is bound to win enthusiastic applause from every audience.

put immediately into circulation again in this country, will disturb business and affect the banks, what does he think will happen when from $600,000,000 to $700,000,000 in gold must leave this country in payment of our foreign debts?

"It is certainly high time that Congress, instead of levying additional taxes to provide funds to take care of unprecedented and extravagant appropriations which have broken all previous records, turn its attention to the problem of rectifying this balance of trade and relieving the general depression that exists throughout the country."

Congressman Kreider was tendered an ovation at the conclusion of his address.

Wildman and Swartz

The rally was the largest ever held by the Harrisburg Republican Club and C. L. Metzger, the president, who presided, was heartily congratulated at the close over the success of the event. Mr. Kreider was unable to remain for the lunch that followed his address, he and John C. Nissley having been booked for addresses in the eastern end of the county. The meeting came to a conclusion with speeches by Augustus Wildman and Joshua W. Swartz, candidates for the Legislature, and he was followed by Phil S. Moyer, a well-known attorney; Congressman Kreider and John C. Nissley, candidate for the Legislature in the county district.

Mr. Nissley also spoke at Fort Hunter, where a meeting was held in the early part of the evening. Arthur H. Hull, by special invitation of the local committee, also addressed the Fort Hunter meeting. At Walnutville the quarrymen held a big rally and were addressed by several well-known Republicans.

Preparing the Civil Service Bill

The drafting of the necessary civil service legislation was left to a committee consisting of Mayor Ira W. Stratton, Reading, and City Solicitors A. A. Cochran, Chester, and F. P. Schoonmaker, Bradford. It will be modeled, nearly as possible after Newcastle's proposed civil service bill.

The changing of the tenure of office of councilmen caused more or less discussion and the significance of the two-year term was recalled by Mr. Gardner. The two-year term was the best that the framers of the Clark bill could get through the Legislature as a substitute for a recall clause. The drafting of the legislation on this subject was left to Mr. Schoonmaker.

"The committee got some fun out of Mayor Stern's suggestion for the levying of a license tax on lawyers and physicians. The lawyers smilingly declined to vote and the mayors and finance superintendents passed the measure."

Revamp "Welfare Section"

To Mr. Gardner was left the work of revamping the "welfare" section. This is the clause that aroused some opposition because of its construction by the courts. Many third-class city officials held that it practically granted the "home rule" privilege to Pennsylvania municipalities.

The substitution of a maximum ninety-day penalty for vagrants and other habits of drunkards was suggested by Mayor Royal and appeared to meet widespread approval. In Chairman Gardner's hands, too, was placed the problem of city lawns and lawns. Chairman Gardner will consider the suggestion to have two semi-annual payment periods for city taxes.

As usual "Harrisburg's way" in dealing with problems that seem to worry other cities a lot, had to be explained yesterday.

BURDEN OF TAX WILL REMAIN UNTIL DEMOCRATS RETIRE

trade is sure to be more and more against us, so that with the Underwood tariff still in force a special tax law will be necessary next year, war or no war, and as long thereafter as this iniquitous legislation remains unchanged.

"The falling off of exports and the increase of imports, which have resulted in the present industrial depression in America, began long before there was any thought of war," said the congressman, "and the government reports show that the falling off in the balance of trade in our favor started with the tariff law that was passed in the month of April, 1914, the balance against us amounted to $11,339,544, and has since steadily grown. Compare this with a balance of trade in our favor of $652,675,915 during the last year of the Payne tariff and you have some understanding of why I say the Underwood law is responsible for the present distressing condition of business in this country. These figures prove, I contend, that there is no truth in President Wilson's oft-repeated assertion that in order to have other nations buy from us we must give them open markets in America. Rather it is the other way about."

"Why, in November, 1912, the very month the Democrats were elevated to power, but with the Republican laws still in operation, we imported merchandise amounting to $153,024,898 and during the same month sold abroad merchandise aggregating $279,244,191, leaving a balance in our favor of $126,149,293. It seems to me that these figures would convince any fair and open minded person that it is not necessary to buy abroad in order to sell abroad."

"The Underwood tariff law has not opened the markets of a single country that were not opened to us before the passage of the bill, but it has succeeded in driving the loss of revenue to us that, aside from the loss of revenue to the government, it has been far more harmful in that it has caused and is directly responsible, as I have said, for the terrible depression of manufacturing interests and the desperate condition of the wage-earners."

The Year's Balance

"It is indeed discouraging to look forward to the time when our year's bill must be squared, when we have no trade balance in our favor. There have been, no doubt on account of the foreign war, turned back on us possibly $200,000,000 in stocks and bonds; we must pay out possibly $200,000,000 more. The American tourists in foreign countries have spent at least $100,000,000. All of these obligations we must meet in gold or its equivalent, and only to-day the Secretary of the Treasury is in conference with prominent bankers trying to find a way out of depleting our nation of its gold supply by finding some other means of settling these accounts. If the President is fearful that the withdrawal of $75,000,000 from the vaults of the national banks, which money would be
