RODERICK HALED INTO COURT AGAIN

Mine Certificate Suit Takes a New Turn in Consequence of a Recent Circular

A preliminary injunction was granted by Judge McCarroll in the Dauphin county court to-day on prayer of two Schuylkill county miners restraining State Chief of Mines James E. Roderick and members of the State Miners' Examining Boards in Schuylkill and Dauphin counties and part of Northumberland from examining miners as to their practical experience in mines to-morrow. The action was taken because of a suit now pending in the Dauphin county court which raised the question of what constitutes practical experience as a miner. This was heard some time ago and counsel for the miners declared in court to-day in asking for the injunction that this week miners who had been mentioned in the proceedings had been ordered to appear before examining boards to give further evidence as to their experience. The injunction was asked to present the status quo of the proceedings.

Hearing Goes On.—The Public Service Commission to-day continued its hearing of the objections to the merger of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern and other railroads into the New York Central. This will be the final hearing of the week before the commission.

Governor Away.—Governor Tener and executive controller left to-day for Philadelphia.

Arbor Day On.—Observance of Arbor Day appears to have been general throughout the State judging from reports received at the Capitol to-day. Thousands of copies of Dr. Schaeffer's proclamation were sent out through the State.

Rifle Practice Figures.—The Adjutant General's Department has issued the figures on the rifle matches held last summer at Mt. Gretna. They give interesting information about the work done.

Helms Increases.—The H. J. Helms Company, of Pittsburgh, has filed notice of an increase of stock from $6,000,000 to $8,000,000.
Contract Let.—The A. L. Menough Company, of York, was awarded the contract from the Allentown armory. Sufficient funds to make up difference between bids and appropriations were found.

MRS. CARMAN TELLS JURYMEN WHY SHE DISTRUSTED DOCTOR

reply to all questions District Attorney Smith might ask her.

She faced a crowded courtroom. Among the 200 or more spectators who occupied every available bit of space were long-time friends and neighbors whose faces were wreathed with hopeful smiles as she began her story. Ranged directly opposite her chair, within the enclosure and less than a dozen steps away, were the mother, the daughter and the husband of the woman whose life the state asserts she took.

Before the defendant took the chair she crossed over to her mother, Mrs. Conklin, sitting at the counsel table, leaned over and kissed her.

"Mrs. Carman," began the district attorney, "you said you were suspicious of your husband. When did you get suspicious?"

"About a year ago."

"What caused her suspicion, she could not say. A woman did not cause it--just rumors."

"Were the rumors about a woman?"

Devil with the Girls

"No. Just someone asking him about his girls. Somebody told me he was a devil with the girls."

She could not recall who told her this, or where, or when. At Mr. Smith's bidding she named many men, friends of Dr. Carman, but could not name one of them as having said "How are all your girls?"

"Somebody was asking him that question all the time," she said. "They were jesting, thought at first, but after a while I thought maybe there might be some truth in what they said. They would say to me 'The doctor is some devil.'"

"Did you have an inclination to hear what the doctor had to say to his women patients?"

"In a way, yes. Some of his patients."

"Did you ask him where he was when he was out all night?"

"Yes, and he told me."

"Yes, sometimes."

"Did your suspicions increase with time?"

"They increased right up to the time of the murder. They have all been dispelled now."

"How long have you been in that frame of mind?"

"Ever since the terrible tragedy. What I heard, or rather what I didn't hear, over the telephone instrument reassured me."

Suspicious of Callers

For several minutes Mrs. Carman sought to evade a direct answer to district attorney's questions as to whether she thought her husband was truthful. Finally she said "No." She explained that she had no real reason to doubt him, however. She was suspicious at first of the women who called frequently at his office; finally she was suspicious of nearly all of his women callers.

"I got tired of hearing things," she said.

"And the fact that a woman would come to his office afterward was enough to make you suspicious? Were you suspicious of your husband or the women?" asked Mr. Smith.

"Both," said Mrs. Carman, firmly.

Some women, Mrs. Carman said, were more attractive to her husband than she was, she had thought. She did not know if there were more than one, but she waited to find out. "I had no particular woman in mind," she said.

Mr. Smith asked if she thought Mrs. Varance, the middle-aged nurse whose face she slapped, was more attractive than she. Mrs. Carman smiled and answered "No."

Under the rapid volley of the district attorney's pitiless questions Mrs. Carman's color rose and fell. She bit her lips; she clenched her gloved hands. She appeared to be about to faint, but her bottle of smelling salts revived her.

Saw Money Passed

She was made to describe the entire scene with Mrs. Varance. She said she saw Dr. Carman give the nurse $15 and saw her kiss him afterward. It was the passage of the money and not the kiss that disturbed her, she said.

"You didn't object to another woman kissing your husband in gratitude?"

"Oh, no," replied Mrs. Carman.

"How long after the passing of the money was the kiss administered?"

"A few minutes. They were sitting down, alongside each other at the time."

Mrs. Carman said she did not rap on the window when the kiss was given, but waited until Mrs. Varance started to leave the office.

"Now, as to the night of the shooting," said Mr. Smith. "Did you hear a shot?"

"No. I heard some commotion."

"What then?"

"I don't know whether I heard a shot or not. I heard a noise."

"And your curiosity was aroused?"

An Unusual Sound

"Surely. It was an unusual sound." She thought it had come from the rear of the house and it took her about a minute to get downstairs, she said. As she reached the head of the stairs she saw two women going down the hall, but she made no effort to find out who they were. After she went down the stairs she walked against a mantelpiece for a moment. She did not see anyone downstairs and went directly upstairs again after having stood by the mantel two minutes, perhaps.

Mrs. Carman's redirect examination was then begun.

PLAN DEVELOPMENT OF PLAYGROUNDS

Municipal League to Discuss Park Improvement Measures Monday Evening

Plans for the development of a system of playgrounds and improvement of two available park tracts in Steelton will be discussed at a meeting of the Municipal League Monday evening. Under the auspices of the Civic Club, a number of playgrounds were started in various parts of the town, but on account of a lack of funds and the proper equipment these places were abandoned this year.

That some steps should be taken immediately for the development of the parks now available and provisions made for playgrounds while ground is available is the opinion of many of the borough's prominent citizens. Harry C. Wright, president of the Municipal League, in speaking of the need for playground facilities this morning said:

"We certainly must make some provisions to keep children off the streets and give them suitably equipped playgrounds. We have been taking rapid strides toward making our borough an ideal place in which to live in recent years, but we have neglected the children."

"We are now spending thousands of dollars to make Steelton the best paved borough in the country; we have voted $12,000 for a sanitary hospital; we are improving the lighting of our streets; our schools are of the highest standard of efficiency--but we have spent not one cent to provide recreation places for our children. It isn't right. We must face the situation fairly and squarely and get together to provide a system of playgrounds and parks."

"Now here is another year gone and we have done nothing toward the development of the parks. The Kelker park tract, presented to the borough several years ago. This tract and the plot of ground surrounding the reservoir could be turned into ideal recreation places at little cost to the borough."

RECEPTION TO SHUPP

Plans for holding a parade and reception in honor of John E. Shupp, Jr., chief of the Steelton volunteer fire department, who was elected vice-president of the State Firemen's Association recently, will be made at a meeting of firemen in the Citizen firehouse this evening. All the fire companies in Steelton will take part in the parade, which will be held next Friday evening. A reception in Markley's Hall, South Front street, will follow.

A Message For All Women

MME. ISEBELL, whose fame is largely due to her famous "Egg" formula, follow her teachings and advise others to do likewise, says:

"Youth and beauty are women's cherished possessions. Do not imperil them by using inferior toilet preparations which are sold in large quantities at low prices. The ravages of disease and time are no more fatal to beauty than the use of improper powders and creams, especially compounded for the bargain counter."

Below we name the products of a lifetime of study, honest intent and intelligent brain. They are regularly purchased and used by such well known women as Maxine Elliott, Gertrude Elliott (now Lady Forbes), Blanche Bates, Cassin Lottin, and hundreds of others. These famous women have made a study of beauty and health. None know better how to preserve and maintain the advantages of a good complexion.
