Presenting a good vaudeville bill, the Colonial started its second week of Keith attractions to an audience that just about taxed its capacity last night. A quite pretentious headliner called "The Fun Shop." leads the list of acts. This is a juvenile musical comedy, comprising a sextet of really clever girls and boys, and they sing and dance and frolic through a little turn that would price and they sing and the continuing, light effects under the girls make it pleasing as a "sight act." Dorothy Brenner, a favorite Orpheum favorite, is there this week, Miss Brenner, who sings "kid" songs so cute, is again seen as the little girl in rompers, and she sings a song to her hoby horse. Miss Brenner also appears as a pretty, grown-up girl, and then she and a clever partner indulge in a clever skit called "The Candy Shop."
