READING CARS WILL GO TO REPAIR SHOPS OCTOBER TONNAGE LOWEST IN YEARS

Rush Coal Business Is Anticipated and the Sidings Will Be Cleared; Activity on Other Lines

Believing that the winter months will bring increased freight traffic in coal and create a demand for cars, the Reading Railway is making an inventory of cars on sidings and ascertaining what repairs are needed.

It was estimated to-day that at least 1,500 cars are on Reading sidings awaiting repairs. Many of these cars will be in shops before Saturday night. Rutherford will get a large consignment of the cars needing repairs.

Attention will also be given box cars as it is the opinion that there will be large shipments of cement and potatoes.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, according to a statement of President Rea before the Interstate railway commission, that company has 35,000 freight cars in need of repairs and out of use on account of the inadequacy of revenue, and that 329 locomotives are tied up for the same reason.

Provision Traffic Heavy.—Provision traffic handled by Chicago railroads last week was the largest in over a year, aggregating 29,166,000 pounds, an increase of 3,487,000 pounds for the week and of 1,159,000 pounds over last year. A feature was the large movement of fresh meat which increased 5,961,000 pounds over last year, while cured meats gained 706,000 pounds and lard 492,000 pounds. Shipments of bag products by rail for the week were 943 cars, against 958 cars the previous week and 759 cars last year.

IRON AGE LOOKS FOR BETTER CONDITIONS Tries to Steal Wife and Five Children

But Husband Heads Him Off and "Lochinvar" Lands in Jail

Tuesday's election results are viewed with considerable favor by the steel trade, according to the Iron Age, a leading trade journal, this morning.

While conditions in the steel industry are still on the decline and the scale of operations is now at the lowest, it is predicted that confidence will soon be restored and that the entire steel industry will feel the increased exports.

Says the Iron Age: "Many steel works furnaces have been blown out and the recent increases in pig iron stocks and warlike conditions are likely to add more impetus to the idle list. Average production of steel ingots is now probably nearer 40 than 50 per cent of capacity."

The low state of consumers' stocks of finished material, of which one indication is the sustained volume of small lot buying from jobbers' warehouses, shows that new orders to the mills are under the rate of the country's real resumption and point to larger operations not far ahead.

"Steel pipe manufacturers have made a reduction in black and galvanized standard pipe.

"Export trade in wire products is still good and there is fresh inquiry for barb wire. Horseshoe works will be able to run full until February on European orders.

A southern company has taken 7,000 tons of billets for England, and more than half of it has been shipped. British mills have quoted so low on such business as to discourage American sellers.

The present paradox of generally sustained prices and pitifully small demand may be followed by that of yielding prices and larger buying.

A WAY TO SAVE TEETH

The wise old saw, "never pull a tooth until all else fails," is getting stronger and more deep-rooted among the profession and the laity every day. There is good reason for this. One tooth means more coming out unless you are quick to take action likely to arrest the process. The germ that starts a tooth's decay is not a big black spot on the enamel. It is well for you if in your sensitiveness you notice the trouble in time, for science says you can save your teeth.

The old saying that your tooth aches as soon as you get up your courage to go to a dentist is strong upon us indeed, hundreds and hundreds of teeth could have been saved to their owners had a little precaution been taken in time. When the gums recede from the tooth, the crevices and tender and ulcerated, don't wait until they pass away from the enamel. When your teeth become loose and rock to and fro and you use your tongue to keep this rocking up, you can surely prevent further annoyance. One drop but go to your drugist and get just four ounces of fluid ergan (no more will be needed) and put a teaspoonful into the mouth morning, noon and night, and keep in the mouth a few minutes. The crevices and its attendant discomforts, as it dissolves the infestments from the teeth. Bleeding will begin to stop, the crevices and lurking places for germs will be washed clean and free, a healthy tissue will begin to make the teeth firm and strong in the gums and altogether you will be free of mouth and teeth troubles. Don't use your tongue to rock the teeth or get out the infections, as these little microbes that eat away the enamel of the teeth and render them yellow and subject to decay will disappear entirely. Yellow teeth become white, the black on the enamel comes off, and your teeth are as white and as strong as ever.—Advertisement.
