Eli's Hope Against Princeton ACCIDENT REPORT

Good Results Will Be Shown at the End of the Year by the New State Bureau

Officials of the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry say that the experience of the last eight months has shown the wisdom of the law requiring reports of all industrial accidents which was so much criticised last year as working a hardship. A statement just issued says:

"A careful study of the reports as they are being received daily by the department shows that a large percent of accidents are preventable and it is believed that after the record of a complete year is available and these reports have been classified and tabulated by the statistical bureau valuable information will be on hand and suitable remedies can be suggested which will appreciably lessen the enormous toll of life and limb which is being collected from the people of Pennsylvania. The department has been endeavoring ever since its establishment to have all persons to whom the law applies comply with its provisions. This has been done by public notices in the newspapers and individual letters and circulars to every manufacturing concern in the State. It is accordingly believed that reports are being received of the major portion of all accidents which are courring in this State. However, there are no doubt large numbers which pass by unnoticed and of which the department is unable to obtain any knowledge.
