PERSONAL SOCIAL

THOMPSON RECITAL IS MOST CREDITABLE

Young American Pianist Delights Large Audience in House of Representatives

John Sylvanus Thompson, a young American pianist who has been winning laurels both in this country and in Europe as an artist of rare ability, gave a recital last evening in the House of Representatives before a large and cultured audience. Young Thompson was enthusiastically greeted, and being a native of Dauphin county, added interest was manifested in his appearance. His program was one of exceptional interest and the applause which greeted each number proved that it was not above the heads of his audience.

The great "Waltz" sonata of Beethoven, which opened the program, was interpreted along traditional lines, which is merely saying that both as regards technique and interpretation nothing more could be added. There is a certain virility in Thompson's tone which makes his rendition of Schumann's music somewhat unusual, if not noteworthy. This was particularly noticeable in the "Aufschwung" hidden meaning in much of Schumann, which the average pianist fails to fathom. In this respect Thompson possesses unusual insight. The dainty scherzo in E minor of Mendelssohn was admirably played and revealed a touch of sylphlike lightness.

The Chopin group, "Ballade" in G minor, "Nocturne" in F sharp, and the great octave "Polonaise," offered splendid contrast to the preceding numbers. In these Chopin numbers Thompson was clearly at home, in fact from a technical standpoint, nothing seems impossible for this young man to undertake. It is rare to find in these days a pianist of artistic balance and a sane conception of character values. Thompson has earned the right to membership in this unusual class. The piece de resistance was undoubtedly the last number, Liszt's "La Campanella," which was played with a dash and bravura most dazzling and called forth thunderous applause. In fact, the audience refused to leave until Thompson responded with an encore.

The program was as follows: Sonata, Op. 53, Beethoven; "Rigaudon," Rameau; Godowsky; "Aufschwung," Schumann; "Nocturne," E major, Schumann; "Minuet," E flat, Beethoven; "Scherzo," E minor, Mendelssohn; "Ballade," G minor, "Nocturne," F sharp, Chopin; "Caprice espagnol," Moszkowski; "Menuet" (all' antico), Liszt; "La Campanella," Liszt.

WHAT THE SHOPS ARE SHOWING

That the Japanese are "a wonderful little people" has become a platitude but undoubtedly, they are wonderful in attaining truly artistic results with almost no expense, yet what they create is never cheap in appearance, but invariably, "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." Such, indeed, are the charming Japanese Groceries shown at the Studebaker Groceries, 225 North Third street, and in this assortment unique fruit plates and dishes with woven Japanese wicker handles, are attractive novelties. Any of the Japanese novelties shown there would be most suitable for gifts, and the prices are from 35c up to $3.50.

Again the Japanese

The art of the Japanese finds no finer expression than in the wall coverings of grass cloth which they weave into color harmonies with the gorgeous beauties of the Orient mellowed into tones fulfilling every requirement of the most conservative Occidental taste. At the A. B. Tack Wall Covering Shop, 1216 North Third street, these beautiful fabric wall coverings are shown, one, in particular, of a rich old gold effect, which they suggest for use in the library where the contrasting tones of the book bindings would find a delightful background. With mahogany furnishings and cornices and trim of old ivory, this golden tone in the sidewalls makes a beautiful room.

What the American Woman Can Create

Not only the Japanese, but American women as well can create beautiful things, and an unusual opportunity being offered to Harrisburg women to prepare for Christmas giving, in the splendid yarn demonstration now being given at the Woman's Exchange, Third street at Herr, where the beginner after purchasing her yarns is given free instruction in knitting any article desired. The new knitted jackets or sweaters are not only very smart and attractive, but most serviceable in this weather, and ideal for gifts, and at the Exchange a beautiful jacket, with rolling collar and turn-back cuffs—a design both becoming and stylish—is on display, and may easily be copied at very small expense.

Smart Contrasts

This season the smartly dressed woman shows her ability to combine contrasting colors artistically, and though hats may match shoe tops, they invariably show a marked contrast to the gown or suit. In nothing is this truer than in the new millinery in pastelle shades worn with the

The French Room at Astich's, is shown a charming pastelle model in which the new Germany has three thicknesses of pastelle beauty by three thicknesses of French crepe, left with unfinished edge and very simply trimmed with dark foliage—a stunning model with a suit of dark green velvet or black broadcloth.

The Vogue of Dull Leather

The use of patent leather in footwear has in no way affected the vogue of dull leather, and a model shown at the Walk Over Boot Shop, 226 Market street, is rather brought into striking relief by its aristocratic simplicity in construction and modish beauty of finish.

The fineness of the leather makes the shoe fit the foot so snugly that the foot appears extremely small and the whole effect makes for the trimness and daintiness so necessary in this season of short skirts. This is a buttoned model with long vamp, high Cuban heel and a tip daintily defined by tiny perforations, giving a very distinctive appearance. The price is $4.50.

The Well-groomed Woman

The thousand uses which the well-groomed woman find for a vanishing cream makes us wonder how we ever got along without it, and it is just the same with the Cream Lila sold at the Gorgas Drug Store for just 25c a jar—one wonders after using it, how one ever endured any other vanishing cream, for its absolute freedom from grease, its soft creaminess, and its delightful fragrance make it most desirable for the dainty woman, and in these days of fall when the skin and complexion require extra care, it is indispensable for keeping the skin soft and beautiful.

New Fiction

The new fiction, which is always in demand, either for gifts or prizes is on sale at the Central Book Store at lowest prices. Good fiction makes the most acceptable sort of gift, for every body reads light fiction and enjoys it. Among the most popular of the new books shown at the Central Book Store, is Bambi, the clever story written about the fascinating personality of Bambi, the vicious heroine, whom "to know is to love." Not only fiction of this light and entertaining class, but the new books of special interest, such as the "Secrets of the German War Office," written by a former member of the German secret service force, is a tale of absorbing interest at this time, and is representative of the complete assortment shown at this store.
