All Able-bodied Men at Almshouse Attacks Government's Attitude on Turkish and Tampico Incidents

All able-bodied men at the county almshouse, all that are not kept busy at the stone quarries and crusher at any rate, will get a chance this winter to appreciate in a small way how Lincoln solved the tiesplitting problem.

For, if the Pennsylvania Raliroad Company will furnish enough old ties, the forty or fifty odd men folks at the county home will be put to work during the winter splitting them, sawing them and otherwise getting them ready for kindling wood.

And the wood will be piled and got in readiness for hauling so that when a poor or needy family applies to the charitable authorities for wood this winter, the poor directors will order the wood hauled in to the house in question.

Benefits in City Case

Further testimony, showing that the opening of Front street, from Paxton street to Iron alley, benefited, rather than damaged the abutting properties, whose park frontage was consequently the defense to day in the front citizens against the city for claims aggregating $3,000.

Former City Assessor Harry F. Oves and William D. Block, a former city sanitary officer, testified, respectively, as to the values of the properties commercially and the benefits derived by the improvement of the section from the Health Department's viewpoint. The session was repeatedly enlivened by the verbal passages at arms of City Solicitor D. S. Seitz, who is handling the city's side of the case, and William A. Hain and John A. Herman, counsel for the plaintiffs.
