Robert J. Burdette, Author and Humorist, Dies in Pasadena, Cal.

Pasadena, Cal., Nov. 20.—Dr. Robert J. Burdette, preacher, author and humorist, died at his home here at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the seventy-first year of his age.

himself once related, "of pleasant things to tell the folks when I went home at night." His audience of "folks" then was Carrie Garrett, the Peoria girl he had married a short time before, while she lay supposedly on her deathbed, but who lived and, though an invalid for life, became immortalized by her husband as "Her Little Sorere Happiness."

was spent in California. At Sunnyrest, Pasadena, he had a spacious house. His first wife had died after fifteen years of encouragement to him. In 1899 he married Mrs. Clara E. Baker, of Pasadena.

ney a blow in the face. Filler's father, H. K. Filler, of Altoona, aided in his son's defense. Attorneys for the accused man said they would ask for a new trial.

ent, brilliant war-lord who is a past-master in the manipulation of German politics and of international intrigues—how does he influence the situation? What of Great Britain? What of France, and Japan, and Italy, and Greece, and Turkey? What of the Slavs of Eastern Europe?

THE OLDEST PLAYWRIGHT Bertha Mann furnished the surprise of the afternoon recently when she essayed a highly emotional role in a play called "The Worth of a Man" at a New York playhouse.

It proved to be a theme as old as Adam, and after the second act Miss Mann abandoned the task of further reading. "You say you created this character?" Miss Mann inquired.
