

WHY MY HUSBAND LEFT ME

By DOROTHY DIX.

"I lost my husband" said the fourth woman, "because I loved him too much."

"One of the chief reasons why marriage is a failure is because women can live on love as a steady diet all of their lives, and still ask for more, while a man is as easily surfeited with affection as he is with sweets. He likes a little love, at the right time and place, as he does a mouthful of dessert, but if never occurs to him to make his whole meal upon it, it's women who are the chocolate cream sex."

"The wisest man that ever lived, and the one who had the most experience with women, exclaimed: 'Stay me with fagons, comfort me with apples, for I am sick of love.'"

"I never made a wedding present that I don't wish that I had the courage to have those words of Solomon illuminated in letters a foot high to present to the bride, for if I did I might save some other foolishly fond woman from making the mistake that I did—which was smothering my husband under so much affection that he suffocated in the domestic atmosphere."

"I wonder what is the purpose of the malign fate that makes people of absolutely diametrically opposite temperaments so fascinating to each other before marriage and so distasteful to each other after marriage? I am by nature sentimental, emotional and of a most affectionate disposition."

"The man I picked out to marry was practical, self-contained, without a shred of romance in his composition. Love was the whole of life to me. There was a million things more important to him. Love did not compare in interest to him, for instance, with business, of golf, or fishing, or baseball."

"I'm not saying he wasn't fond of me. He was in his way. I am sure that he cared for me more than he ever did for any other woman, and he was kindness and generosity itself to me. He lavished upon me everything in the world but one thing that I wanted most—and that was love. I adored him, worshipped him. I had no life except as it came to me through him. I simply did not exist when he was out of my sight, and so to be near him I became a sort of Old woman of the sea that he could never shake off although I had too little sense to realize what I was doing, and that I must inevitably make him hate me, as we all do the burden on our backs."

"Just for the sheer joy I had in looking at him I took to haunting his office until finally he was forced to forbid me to come to his place of business."

"It must bore you to sit around, waiting for me to get time to take you to lunch, or to go home," he said at first. "Oh, no," I replied, "I am never bored when I am near you, even if I can't speak to you. I'd just rather sit and look at you than go to any play."

"Well," he exclaimed, brutally at last, "you get on my nerves sitting around here, until I want to scream, and if you don't stay at home you will drive this whole business into bankruptcy. I don't potter around your kitchen. Do keep out of my office."

"Of course, I wailed and wept over this harshness, but it taught me nothing. If I couldn't be with him during business hours I was determined to be his companion during his hours of recreation, so although I loathe every form of outdoor sport, I tagged along at his heels over golf courses, and trudded beside him on fishing expeditions, and, as I know now, spoiled every holiday for him. For I never learned to do anything but go fishing or caught a fish, or was anything but a spoilt-sport on any outing."

"My husband, on the contrary, was an expert at all sorts of athletic stunts. Moreover, he was a man of the society of other men, and it makes me wince to this day to think how much I must have bored him."

"My love also made me a tyrant to him and caused me to nag him to desperation. He was a big, husky fellow, self-reliant to the last degree, and yet I was so tormented with fear that he would get run over by an automobile going to his office that I would telephone to know if he had arrived safely, and if he was thirty minutes late getting home, I was walking the floor with hysterics."

"I never let him eat what he wanted to for fear it would make him sick, and I would ask him a thousand times if he was sure his feet were dry, or if he was sitting in a draught. If he wanted to read his paper of an evening I wept because he wouldn't talk to me, and when he started away of a morning, no matter how much of a hurry he was in, I called him back for a dozen farewell kisses."

"In a word, I made my love a burden and a bore to my husband. I wearied him to death with my society. I became the one thing that he could never shake off for a moment, and at last he came to hate me, and when he could endure it no longer he left me."

"You see, I forgot that man is a huntsman by nature, and that he wants to chase a woman instead of being chased by her. If I had loved him less he would have loved me more. I am the victim of loving not wisely, but too well—which goes for husbands as well as other men."

AMUSEMENTS

MAJESTIC

COLONIAL
Every afternoon and evening—Vaudeville and Pictures.

"THE DUMMY"
"The Dummy," with the famous New York cast that has been playing at the Hudson Theater since last season, comes to the Majestic to-morrow evening fresh from its record run on the Great White Way.

"The instantaneous success of 'The Dummy' on its opening night, the enthusiastic welcome given it by every class of people, and the genuine cordiality with which the playgoers have flocked to it, month after month, make it the most popular play of the kind of entertainment that can be depended on to delight everybody. It is a popular comedy, not a farce, and is not resisted, a detective comedy in which there is 'something doing' every minute of the play. It is a play that gets right down to the human side of life and is lovable all through. When the play was first produced at the Hudson Theater, New York, by the Play Producing Company—Advertisement.

ORPHEUM
The world's champion deep sea diver will demonstrate many thrilling and decidedly different types of water work as one of the pre-eminent attractions of the new offering that will be uncovered at the Locust street playhouse to-day. This champion of the briny deep is no less than Captain Louis Sorcho, the man who was appointed by the U. S. State Department to bring the Maine to the water's surface, who invented the under water telephone system, and who is considered an all round authority on all topics pertaining to diving and submarine work. Mr. Sorcho is actually born in a small ocean on the stage, he shows how a submarine mine is worked, how a diver's life is spent, and tells many wonderfully interesting things concerning a part of the world that few know anything of. The fact that Mr. Sorcho will present at the Orpheum this week is so pretentious of musical comedy, it will have excellent support in presenting a screaming comedy called "Going Into Vodvil," pretty Dolly Connelly, an Orpheum favorite, returns in the second part, and new gowns; Hawthorne and English will present a "naughty" comedy act with the title of "The Naughty Nones." A laughing treat in a skit called "Al-mother's Juggler," and the O'Donnell Brothers will give something in the way of a comedy surprise stunt including some great jumping feats.—Advertisement.

COLONIAL
At the Colonial during the first half of the week, "Felix," the only mind-revealer in the world, will tell you your past, present and future. And the fun that "Felix" don't make, will be more than made good by the fine funsters, the Grand Koozes, who present their "The Three American Trampsters," which will offer a refined instrumental and vocal offering. J. Morrison and company are slated to present an interesting protean playlet, and Fern and Zell are bound to create a bounded merriment with their blackface comedy, songs and dances. "The Phantom Detective," a splendidly staged and well acted play, will make a special appeal to admirers of moving picture "fans." This attraction is presented in the first half of the week.—Advertisement.

AT THE PALACE TODAY
Nothing pleases the Universal better than to see its patrons a genuine treat in the way of drama or comedy. And to motion picture company to-day is achieving that aim more thoroughly and consistently than the "Big 1." As a case in point, consider the "Aerone O'Rourke" stories, the two-part Victor, "His Hand, His Sword," which is the first to be filmed for you. Can you imagine anything greater than the way of a treat in a series written by Louis Joseph Vance—author of the "Troy of Hearts" serial—and produced under the direction of Vitaphone Jaccard, with J. Warren Kerrigan in the title role, supported by a cast of such well known stars as Tom Sison, George Parliot and M. E. Robbins.

A young heart yearning for adventure, it is the story of a romance, all woven into a story with the vividness of telling which has made the name of Louis Joseph Vance famous in every English speaking country. And for the character of our adventurer, O'Rourke, fearless, dashing, gallant, humorous, with a heart that beats noble ideals, no better type than Mr. Kerrigan could have been chosen. His personality, his wonderful physical ability as an actor all combine to make him the ideal man for the role. See "His Hand, His Sword," the story of a short story with the grip afforded only the powerful play.—Advertisement.

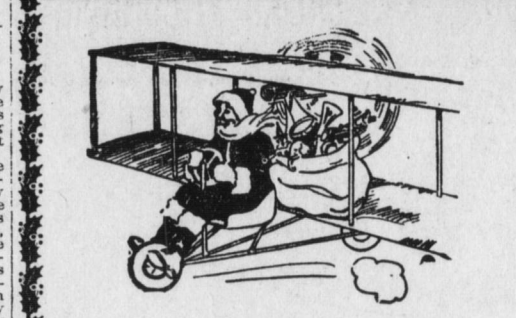

AT THE PHOTOPLAY
"Hope Foster's Mother," a special Vitaphone feature with Mary Maurice, the grand old mother of the Vitaphone Company, in the leading role. Mrs. Mary Maurice has been greatly missed by her many admirers, as she has been very ill for the past few months. She will be welcomed back by all. Wednesday we present "With Fire and Sword," a six-act feature production, showing ten acres of flames.—Adv.

THE TUNIC IN ITS LATEST FORM

A New and Interesting Skirt that Provides Considerable Width.

By MAY MANTON

8463 Two-Piece Skirt with Russian Tunic, 24 to 30 waist.

This tunic with the plaited panel is one of the very newest. It is exceedingly smart in its lines, it is becoming to most figures and since the skirt is laid in an inverted plait at each seam, it provides comfortable fullness while it still retains fashionable lines. Here gabardine is used throughout but this is essentially a season of combinations and a handsome and fashionable effect could be obtained by making the skirt or lower portion of the skirt, of satin or any similar material that contrasts well with the tunic. The finish may be made at either the high or the natural waist line. The plaited panels are separate from the tunic itself and joined to it; therefore, if liked they, as well as the skirt, can be of a contrasting material, and that feature is an especially good one in view of the many gowns that will require renovating this season.

For the medium size, the skirt will require 2 1/2 yds. of lining material 36 in. wide, with 1 yd. 27 or 3/8 yd. 36 or 44 or 50 for facing; the tunic 4 yds. 27 or 36, 3 1/4 yds. 44 or 50 in. wide. The width of 3 1/4 yds. 1 yd. and 3/2 in. before plait is laid.

The pattern of the skirt 8463 is cut in sizes from 24 to 30 inches waist measure. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents.

BREAKING OUT OF PIMPLES ON HEAD

Which Itched. Dried in White Scales. Hair Came Out Gradually. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

318 So. Lawrence St., Philadelphia, Pa. "I had a breaking out on the head. Small pimples came which were very red and itched and I scratched them. Then they dried up into white scales. I thought it was dandruff. When I combed my hair the scales showed up white. My hair came out gradually as the scales dried off."

"I saw an advertisement of a soap and I used it but found no relief. It caused me to be awake at nights for it made my head itch something awful. A friend suggested a cake of Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment. I sent for a sample which I promptly received, then I bought one of Cuticura Ointment and three cakes of Cuticura Soap and now I am entirely cured and my hair has come in as well as ever." (Signed) Miss Lydia Lockman, Feb. 18, 1914.

Samples Free by Mail

A generation of mothers has found no soap so well suited for cleansing and purifying the skin and hair of infants and children as Cuticura Soap. Its absolute purity and refreshing fragrance alone are enough to recommend it above ordinary skin soaps, but there are added to these qualities delicate yet effective emollient properties, derived from Cuticura Ointment, which render it most valuable in overcoming a tendency to distressing eruptions and promoting a normal condition of skin and hair health when all else fails. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 25-pc. book on skin and scalp troubles. Address postcard "Cuticura, Lepp, T. Boston."

Miss Fairfax Answers Queries

NOT TO BE THOUGHT OF
DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
My daughter is 22 and has been going with a young man of 25 and is engaged to marry him. This young man we found out a few weeks ago has been married five years, and his wife ran away from him, but he gave us an assumed name when his wife came to the house. He also admitted he was going to marry her in that assumed name, and take the risk without being divorced. My daughter knew he was married all the time. My husband and I told him to keep away from the house and not to write or see her before he got a divorce. But he has seen her, and sent letters, telling her not to take notice of us or anybody else, but just use her own mind. The engagement ring which he gave her has not the right initials inside.

A WORRIED MOTHER.

Your daughter has been a rash and foolish girl and the man's actions were criminal. It might have been better to refrain from bigamy had the marriage taken place, and disgrace and shame would certainly have come to her. I do not see how she can ever trust him again. My daughter knew he was married all the time. My husband and I told him to keep away from the house and not to write or see her before he got a divorce. But he has seen her, and sent letters, telling her not to take notice of us or anybody else, but just use her own mind. The engagement ring which he gave her has not the right initials inside.

LEGISLATORS IN CITY FOR SEATS

Old Timers Will Be Found in Their Accustomed Places During the Next Session

Men elected to the next Legislature are commencing to be frequent visitors at the offices of the officials of the two houses and nine times out of ten they place to see about their seats in the chambers and to get a line on the best place to live during the session. Incidentally, almost every man of past legislative experience expresses the belief that the session will be short and that the big legislation will be presented early and handled expeditiously.

Several Democrats occupying the same desks session after session. Senator W. C. Sprull, the "Father of the Senate," has had a front row seat since the present chamber was occupied. The Democrats will have the west side of the chamber, as before, but some of those in the rear will move up because of changes, the most prominent of which will be the retirement of the Democratic veteran, J. K. P. Hall.

In the House Resident Clerk W. S. Leib will follow the historic lines in seating the Democrats, who will have the east side of the chamber, although owing to the fact that there will be but forty-one this year will not necessitate putting some of them over into the central block, as was the case last year. Fred C. Ehrhardt, of Scranton, the oldest Republican in point of continuous service, and John M. Flynn,
