ICE CAME EARLY ON STATE'S STREAMS

Interesting Data Issued by the State Water Supply Commission on Streams

The first day of December found a number of the tributaries of the Ohio river system and some of the streams in the upper basins of the Susquehanna full of ice and reports have reached the State Water Supply Commission that some of the streams were frozen as early as Thanksgiving Day. The only sections which did not show the effects of the unusually cold weather were the Susquehanna below Sunbury and the Belknap.

At Williamsport there was much ice reported and at one time the river was covered by a thin coat of ice, while up the West Branch and along the Sinnemahoning some streams were frozen. All have much ice and snow.

On the North Branch the main river ran with slush ice and some of the tributaries were frozen. Tunkhannock creek having much snow and three-quarters of an inch of ice.

In the west ice was reported at Tonawanda, Slippery Rock, Connoqueoning and other streams reported ice, while on French creek, in Erie county, there is strong ice and sleighing was enjoyed. Clearfield creek, near Dime, is frozen, as the mercury is reported as having gone below zero.

The Allegheny, Monongahela and Youghiogheny rivers reported much slush ice, as did the Beaver, some of whose tributaries were frozen.

WAR BOOSTS EXPORTS

Figures for October, Kept Secret, Show Total of $86,080,971

New York, Dec. 2.—Striking effects of the war on the foreign commerce of the port of New York are shown by the October details of exports which became public for the first time yesterday. The reason for the shutting off until the lapse of thirty days upon publicity by the Treasury Department regarding ship manifests during October was also quite evident in the amazing jumps in volume of exports to neutral countries near Germany shown in the October statement this year as compared with last. Total October exports were $86,080,971, an increase of $48,249 over 1913, and the greatest of any month since the beginning of the war.

PARTIAL PARENTS.

Do you not think parents make a mistake when they show partiality to a first-born child and an indifference toward the younger ones?

This would be a truly frightful condition to be found in any home, and should least of all be expected in a Christian home. The only excuse for partiality would be when one child in the family is weak or sickly or in trouble of any kind and so requires special sympathy and care. It often happens that one child will be by disposition and temperament specially congenial to a parent. In a case the parent should take special pains to be thoughtful, helpful and winsome to the others, so that they could not feel any restraint at thinking that one is a favorite. Kindness and attention to all and real comradeship will help the rest to come up to the parent's ideal. It is inconceivable that any Christian parent could be "indifferent" to any of the children. Almost the cruellest heartaches of life are those suffered by children who fancy their parents do not love them. Any mother who finds herself tempted to be specially fond of one child must exert herself to extra thoughtfulness for the others, and, in trying to make all happy, will find her heart expanding to give all an equal chance of love. —Christian Herald.

UP TO COMPANIES TO SHOW REASONS

Public Service Makes Plain Its Attitude in Regard to the Fare Increase Case

The Public Service Commission in deciding to hold a formal hearing in Philadelphia on Thursday, December 10, in the matter of the proposed increase of passenger fares, notified the railroad companies that in this hearing the burden of proof to show the reasonableness and lawfulness of the increased fares lies with these companies.

The letter to the railroad companies follows:

"Please take notice that the Public Service Commission will, in accordance with the provisions of Section 4, Article 5, of the public service company law, and without further answer previously filed by the respondent railroad companies, proceed to an investigation of the reasonableness and lawfulness of the increased passenger fares, changes in passenger fare tariffs and classifications therein contained, proposed to become effective December 15, 1914, or thereafter, at a hearing to be held in Philadelphia on Thursday, December 10, 1914, at 10 o'clock a. m.

"At this hearing respondent carriers will be prepared to present evidence upon the reasonableness and lawfulness of said proposed increased passenger fares."

The complainants are not advised to present evidence upon the reasonableness of the fares, but are simply notified that this will be a formal hearing for the purpose of taking testimony.

HABIT CAVES.

I think the old legend is suggestive of a great truth. Moral acts and the caves in which slumber the winds which sweep the human heart. We have control of the caves, and we can let out whatever wind we please. If we do Christly deeds, we let loose a south wind in our lives, a balmy, genial wind, which will waft us towards our God. If we do un-Christly deeds, then we let loose a north wind, cold and destructive, which will create a wintry, desolate heart. In the common daily life we are every moment originating the force which is to determine our destiny, and "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." —The Christian Herald.

THE DEN AT CHRISTMAS TIME

Too often the decoration of the den is allowed to remain monotonously commonplace, and for the Christmas season, freshly painted rooms add greatly to the spirit of good cheer. The A. B. Tack Wall Paper Shop, 1216 North Third street, offers a very original design for the den suggesting mountain scenery with romantic turreted castles and quaint rustic cottages portrayed in soft colorings of red, green, brown and tan skillfully blended. With oak, mission or walnut furnishings the decoration is particularly beautiful, and the use of a broad stain rail adds to the artistic effect.
