Gallon looked at his enemy with the simplicity of an old man telling a proved truth. "They were all my friends," he said.

"Friends?" said Wilkerson in a sud-denly changed voice, and, thrusting his contorted face close to Gallon's, "I don't care about your friends, but you better care about the enemy you made."

For one instant the mine owner's face grew stern and pitiless. But he heard a step on the outside porch, and

"My God, Harry; I did it for the The evil soul of Wilkerson flared be Wilkerson leaned forward, and his Ups hissed hate as he returned: "Do you remember that woman in Valle

Vista five years ago—that woman you thought your little daughter too good to speak to? It was you who drove her out of camp, and now"—he smiled fatuitously-"she's rich and in Nev York, and she hates you!"

Gallon bowed his head. "What is it you want, Harry?" he whispered huskily.

The other man pulled a paper out of his pocket and threw it on the ta-"There's a contract for you to sign." At this moment the door opened and Ruth entered. She stared a mo ment at the visitor and then looked anxiously at her father, who said: "This is an old partner of mine, Ruthy-Harry Wilkerson." Ruth shyly looked at the tall stranger and then shook hands with him. He held her gentle fingers a second too long. Her face flushed, and she retired without a backward glance.

Without paying any more attention to the old man, who had now subsided into a chair by the table, Wilkerson walked to the window and watched the slim, girlish figure of the young girl tripping down the hill. Then he swung on the old man harshly: "Well, I need a job. You need a new super intendent, don't you? I guess I'll take the place."

He stepped quickly to the window once more. This time he saw Ruth, with Tom Kane, the old cook, and an other, in front of the cook house.

"Come here, Tom. Who is that talk ing to that girl of yours?" he said. Gallon got up heavily from his chair and walked over to the window, and he could not repress an expression of relief. "Oh, that's the mining engineer of 'The Master Key,' John Dorr!"

With a quick swing Wilkerson was back, leaning over the table. He picked up the paper. "Sign here!" he said insolently.

Gallon made a last faint protest: "I

Wilkerson picked up a pen, dipped it and put it in the old man's hand.

Just as the last letter of that signa ture, which had so long stood for respectability, was blotted at the foot of the paper Ruth entered.

"I expect we'll see a good deal of each other from now on," Wilkerson said silkily, and with those slim, white fingers of his he reached out and pinched Ruth's cheek.

Ruth did not draw back. She clinch. ed her firm little hand and Wilkerson received a blow in the mouth that made him stagger back.

At the moment that he received that stinging blow he heard a movement to one side of him, and, with the old in-stinctive fear of Thomas Gallon, he drew away back with his hand on the gun at his hip. He met the flaring eyes of the old man, who had risen from his seat, and understood that until life left that decrepit frame its mastering passion—the passion which he could not hope to master—would be love for the girl whom he had just insulted.

He made a daring apology, the apolo gy of the coward and the liar. "I beg your pardon, Ruth, but you used to sit on my knee when you were a little one."

She merely glanced at him and went out of the bungalow. She did not see her father rise to his full height and "Come on," Wilkerson said roughly, "don't get excited. Now take me down and introduce me to the boys." Gallon sighed heavily as he obeyed and took him to where John Dorr was now starting his day's work. "John," he said heavily, "this is Harry Wilkerson, the new superintendent of the mine. He used to be my partner. It won't interfere with your work any." He paused for breath. "In fact, it will take a lot of extra details off your shoulders.' John looked at Wilkerson. His heart was filled with bitterness, but he simply said, "All right, Mr. Gallon," and "Well," said Wilkerson, "I'll take charge right away." He picked up a telegraph blank and sat down at the desk with a new assurance. As if he teeth, folded up the telegram and called roughly to a boy lounging outside on the porch: "Here, take this to the telegraph station, and be quick about it!" Then he addressed himself to an examina-tion of the reports and time sheets and various papers that explained the working of the mine. His soft, white fingers caressed receipts that spoke of gold extracted from the earth.

CHAPTER VI.

The Golden Key. FTER he had left his former partner in the office Thomas Gallon slowly went up to the bungalow. There was a glimmer of satisfaction in his dim eyes as he thought of the fact that the location of the real lode was unknown and that the plans that might reveal it were far beneath the waters of the Pacific. He went inside to the desk and picked out of the locker drawer the golden key which held his secret.

He stared at it and read the numbers that marked the position of the lost vessel, and the chest that held the Whom could he trust with He looked out of the window and called to John Dorr.

"John!" he quavered. "I've already told you a little about my finding this mine and about my old partner."

That the dandruff germ is responsible for nearly all the diseases to which the scalp is heir, as well as for baldness and premature gray hair, is a well known fact, but when we realize that it is also indirectly responsible for many other diseases as well, we appreciate the importance of any agent that will destroy its power. We are therefore, particularly pleased to give herewith the prescription which an eminent scientist states he has found after repeated tests, to completely destroy the dandruff germ in from one to three applications. It will also almost immediately stop falling hair and it has in numerous cases produced a new hair-growth after years of partial baldness. Mrs. Levi Smith Was Told That Taking Medicine in Her Present Condition Would Be Dangerous, Yet She Took Quaker Extract and Her Life Was Saved

The Address of This Party is Union Deposit, Dauphin County, Pa., and the Truth of This Cure May Be Investigated in Any Manner Which Might Suggest Itself

Mrs. Levi Smith lives in Union Deposit, Dauphin county, Pa., a little village about thirteen miles east of Harrisburg. She is the mother of an infant still nursing and it was owing to these circumstances that medicine was refused her, as it had been said that it would be harmful to mother and child. The advice was sincere and true, as in such a case nearly all medicine would indeed be dangerous. But Quaker Extract is a purely vegetable product, containing no poisons, and can therefore be safely taken by young or old under all of life's conditions and all
