ANOTHER TWIST IN SHOOTING OF EAGLE

Justice Dismisses the Case Against Hunter For Error in the Law

Lewistown, Pa., Dec. 8.—The Peffer eagle-shooting case has had more twists and turns in it than any case ever brought before a magistrate here. Yesterday Justice VanNatta dismissed the charge of shooting the bird against the hunter, relieving him from paying a fine of $10, the prescribed penalty for the offense.

It is due to a typographical error that Justice VanNatta felt himself justified in dismissing the charge. In the index of the 1913 edition of the game laws, edited by Secretary Kaibfus, of the State Game Commission, appears this statement: "Eagles, not protected." Reference to the law, however, shows by inference that eagles are protected. The species is not mentioned in the list of protected wild birds.

Persons appeared before me this 14th day of February, 1913, Mr. T. A. Bennett, of the above-mentioned address, who stated and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.

DEFENSES OF NATION NOT NEGLECTED, SAYS PRESIDENT MESSAGE

defense. We are not unmindful of the great responsibility resting upon us. We shall learn and profit by the lesson of every experience and every new circumstance; and what is needed will be adequately done.

Has Hopes For Peace To peace in Europe the President referred briefly: "We are the champions of peace and of concord," he said. "And we should be very jealous of this distinction which we have sought to earn."

Urges Guard Development "It is right, too, that the National Guard of the States should be developed and strengthened by every means which is not inconsistent with our obligations to our own people or with the established policy of our government."

Would Reverse Policy "More than this carries with it a reversal of the whole history and character of our policy. More than this, proposed at this time, permit me to say, would mean merely that we had lost our self-possession, that we had been thrown off our balance by a war with which we have nothing to do."

Believes in Defense Only "A powerful navy we have always regarded as our proper and natural means of defense; and it has always been of defense that we have thought, never of aggression or conquest."

Needs in Europe "It is of equal consequence that the nations whom Europe has usually supplied with innumerable articles of manufacture and commerce of which they are in constant need and without which their economic development halts and stands still can now get only a small part of what they formerly imported and eagerly look to us to supply their all but empty markets."

Toll Not Complete "But I think that you will agree with me that this does not complete the toll of our duties. How are we to carry our goods to the empty markets of which I have spoken if we have not the ships? How are we to build up the great trade of which we have not the certain and constant means of transportation upon which all profitable and useful commerce depends?"

Legislation Badly Needed "Hence the pending shipping bill, discussed in the government but as yet passed by neither House. In my judgment such legislation is imperatively needed and can not wisely be postponed. The government must open these gates wide and open them wide; open them before it is altogether profitable to open them, or altogether reasonable to ask private capital to open them at a venture."

Greater Than Krupp's

Sixty-five thousand men are now working day and night in the big Krupp gun works in Germany, turning out guns to destroy the greatest number of human lives.

of paper to write upon. Certainly the government of the United States is not, I think that it is generally agreed that there should be a systematic re-organization and reassembling of its parts so as to secure greater efficiency and effect considerable savings in expense. But the amount of money saved in that way would, I believe, though no doubt considerable in itself, running, it may be, into the millions, be relatively small, small, I mean, in proportion to the total necessary outlays of the government. It would be thoroughly worth effecting, as every saving would, great or small. Our duty is not altered by the scale of the saving. But my point is that the people of the United States do not wish to curtail the activities of this government; they wish, rather, to enlarge them; and with every enlargement, with the mere growth, indeed, of the country itself, there must come, of course, the inevitable increase of expense. The sort of economy we ought to practice may be effected, and ought to be effected, by a careful study and assessment of the tasks to be performed; and the money spent ought to be made to yield the best possible return in efficiency and achievement. And, like good stewards, we should so account for every dollar of our appropriations as to make it perfectly evident what it was spent for and in what way it was spent.

Nation Is Generous "It is not expenditure but extravagance that we should fear being criticized for; not paying for the legitimate enterprises and undertakings of a great government whose people command what it should do, but adding what will benefit only a few, pouring money out for what need not have been undertaken at all or might have been postponed or better and more economically conceived and carried out. The nation is not stingy; it is very generous. It will chide us only if we forget for whom we pay money out and whose money it is we pay. These are large and general standards, but they are not very difficult of application to particular cases.

Talks of Expenditures "Before I close may I say a few words upon two topics, much discussed of doors, upon which it is highly important that our judgments should be clear, definite and steadfast. One of these is economy in government expenditures. The duty of economy is not debatable. It is manifest and imperative. In the appropriations we pass we are not only spending the money of the great people whose servants we are, not our own. We are trustees and responsible stewards of the money of the people. It is not in the spending, the only point of which the nation should be careful to make our thought and purpose clear is the kind of economy demanded of us. I assert with the greatest confidence that the only kind of economy which the United States government should if they are sure that they get what they need and desire for the outlay, that the money being so expeditiously applied, and that it is being applied with good business sense and management."
