AMUSEMENTS

COLONIAL
Six Singing Bees, the finest and cutest little "honey bees" anybody could wish to see, are offering the bright, particular attraction of a fine bill at the Busy Corner. This is a juvenile production, comprising a trio of little boys and a trio of little girls, and they offer a singing act that is alone worth the time and price. The Melody Trio, three young men in harmony, both vocal and instrumental, are pleasing immensely on this same stage. A breezy song and patter trio and a pleasing musical novelty round out the roster. "St. Elmo," a six-reel moving picture, based on the famous novel by that name, is said to be the finest "movie" yet seen at the Colonial. It will remain there during the first half of the week. — Advertisement.

PHOTOPLAY TODAY
Tom Moore, popular Kalem actor, appears to-day in a two-act Kalem drama, "The Prodigal." His insolent attentions repulsed by Violet, a country girl, Howard Gordon follows, the maid into the little church, where she is to rehearse with the village choir. The simple hymn Violet sings awakens Gordon's better nature and he later apologizes for his conduct.

Although all thought of the man passes from Violet's mind, Gordon thinks of her constantly in the months which follow. Marie, an adventuress who has been endeavoring to ensnare the man, finds him proof against her wiles. Some time afterward Violet secures a position in the city with a large concern. Not until she sees Gordon at his desk in the president's office does she realize that he is her employer.

Deeply in love with her, the man asks Violet to be his wife. Although Violet returns his love, she rejects his suit. Several days later Gordon induces Violet to attend a dinner which he is giving to some friends. To Violet's intense amazement, he suddenly proposes a toast to her as his future wife. Mistaking the girl's silence, the guests shower her with congratulations. — Advertisement.

PALACE TODAY, THE MASTER KEY
Two prospectors, James Gallon and Wilkerson have been searching for gold. Gallon has made a lucky strike and has tried to conceal the fact from Wilkerson. The partners are sitting around the campfire one evening when suddenly Wilkerson becomes thirsty; after taking drinks of water he falls asleep. Gallon walks some distance and starts drawing the plans of his find.

Wilkerson awakens. Gallon grabs his gun, turns and fires at Wilkerson. Gallon leaves Wilkerson apparently dead.

Gallon reaches the small mining town of Jacito and tells the sheriff that he and his partner were attacked by outlaws and his partner killed. The sheriff calls for volunteers. Out of the saloon comes a boy who cries "I'm game." Jumps on a horse—and the posse is off.

The boy is thrown to the ground when his horse stumbles. Wilkerson comes from the brush and he and the boy go slowly on.

At the camp the sheriff and deputy and no one. The sheriff returns and orders Gallon's arrest. Gallon severs his bonds by holding his hands over the fire. Feigning to return to the scene of his supposed crimes, Gallon leaves San Francisco by ship for his home. Visions of Wilkerson begin to appear before him. He hides the plan to his mine in a Japanese idol's head.

Once out to sea a mutiny ensues, during which the ship catches fire. Shortly after it sinks, Gallon is washed ashore. Realizing that he has nothing to indicate the location of the disaster, he engraves the approximate longitude and latitude where the ship went down on the key to the chest, known afterward as "The Master Key." A week later he is rescued and returns home, where he meets his daughter, Ruth.

Five years ensue. Gallon returns to the mines, which he begins developing. About this time Gallon writes to a New York stock broker, named Gates, asking him for advice relative to floating "The Master Key" mine. On the day that Gates receives Gallon's letter, John Dore, a young mining engineer, calls upon the former and is thereupon engaged as consulting and construction engineer for Gallon. He immediately goes West to take up his work. Here he meets Gallon's daughter, Ruth.

The Moving Picture World says about "England's Menace." "The theme is well carried out—the series of incidents in the action of the picture are concise and sustain the deepest interest. The scenes showing the battleships stripped for action and in war array are impressive to a high degree." — Advertisement.

ORPHEUM
Pretty Bessie Wynn, with her winning ways and winning self, came to the Orpheum yesterday and simply took the house by storm. Everybody seemed so glad to see this charming songstress back again and after she sang all her songs and then tried out a brand new one, she told the audience, in song, how much she appreciated their applause. Miss Wynn's songs, as of yore, are original and particularly adapted to the charming little lady's particular talents. Also she is exhibiting a wardrobe that caused ripples of comment among the ladies. Miss Wynn seems to improve each time she comes back to Harrisburg and accordingly pleases more for each visit she makes. And then, speaking of favorites of this bill, one can't speak of Joe Jackson lightly. Yesterday afternoon and last night Joe's toes got mixed up with his bicycle to the uproarious laughter of all. Theatergoers who like to laugh must see Joe Jackson, for he seems funnier than ever. Also the Farber Girls are offering a new act, and they scored a solid hit of this bill, too. In fact, the Orpheum's bill is one of the best, if not the very best, ever seen at the Locust street playhouse. — Advertisement.
