Why My Husband Left Me

Carranza agency last night reported:
"Our forces routed the enemy under General Salgado and Eliodoro Castillo, near the Balsas river, in Guerrero, where they suffered considerable lears of life.

By DOROTHY DIX.

"I lost my husband," said the fifth woman, "through my vanity and silly sentimentalism.

"I was a pretty girl, a little soft pink-andwhite-and-gold, fluffy-headed girl, one of the kind of girls that always have a string of boys tagging after them, and who make some sort of especial appeal to men a long as they live, just because they are femininity raised to the highest point. I had been a village belle, a bit of a flirt, and proud of the power of my big, innocent looking blue eyes.

"What little brains I had were filled full of the slush of erratic novels. I had been raised on sentiment and admiration, and flattery was as necessary to me as the air I breathed. I could not even imagine life without it.

"I say all this in my own defence, because it is my only excuse for the foll with the raised my wife and woman grasps at any sort of look and the sum only excuse for the foll with the procedure of the first was my case. My vanity

Some Realty Men "Cocky"

"In fact," said Herman P. Miller, "some realty men feel a little 'cocky' at the prospect of early sales in unexpected quarters. We think this will be a between year than last and we have reason to feel that the total amount of sales at the end of the year will be very satisfactory.

"Although the year just past, on account of the general depression, was considered poor by the majority of real estate dealers, our general sales were not much under the total of the previous year. Harrisburg is a city of slow and conservative growth and we never expect any great splutter in business. We expects a gradual increase in population and expect several new business projects that may bring more work to the city."

Mr. Miller said he was not at liberty to say just what these new enterprises are. He went on to speak of the many inquiries received by the firm from people who are looking to Harrisburg as a fine residence town, and of the large number who settle here.

Miss Fairfax Answers Queries

HE DOESN'T REALLY CARE DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

HE DOESN'T REALIZE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My young man sometimes has another girl, and recently when taking me home from the theater we met her and asked her to accompany us to the restaurant. He took her arm and left me standing in the street while he went with her. He will not come often to my home, but wants me to go his, instead. I am very fond of him and would be willing to marry him, but he says nothing definite, although we have been keeping company for some time. Shall I suggest that he make a home for me?

Don't think of it. If he really cares

Don't think of it. If he really cares for you in the right way he will be anxious always for your pleasure and comfort. I always think there is something the matter with a man who will not go to a girl's home and meet her parents. If he wants the other girl, let him have her. Anyway, the way to make him care is by holding yourself aloof, sometimes.

PERPLENITY.
No honorable man will want to keep up a so-called friendship with a single woman, unknown to his wife and the girl's family. And be sure of this, that no matter if a married man leaves his wife for someone else, he will go back to her in the end, for she is his wife and has his respect, and the marriage tie is bound to draw him back.

Business Looks Good All Along Line
The opinion of J. E. Gipple, a prominent Hill real estate man, is that the early part of the year may not be very active, but that the year all through will be much better than last and the prospects for real estate business are generally bright.

D. E. Brightbill said that although things are now very quiet and have been so for several months, last year was a fairly good one for him and the prospects are for another good year during 1915.

M. R. Alleman, of Steelton, said, "I look for quite a boom to come soon in real estate in this neighborhood and think the year will be better by far than last year. I have a number of prospects for sales and inquiries that indicate a very brisk season, among them being several calls for properties from people who are in line for new buildings as soon as the weather opens up. The prospects are indeed very bright."

These blanks must be ffled not later than March 1. Failure to do so within the required time will mean a penalty. The fine is 50 per cent. Of the tax or a flat penalty of from 20 to $1,000.

Figures showing the total amount of income tax paid in Harrisburg are not available now. It is the belief fluore still the local revenue collector that the figures will run far into the thousands of dollars.

There is still considerable misunder-standing regarding the blanks. The spanies, association and insurance companies, association and insurance for individuals, manufacturers and mercantlle corporations.
