

SIX-CENT BREAD OR SMALLER LOAVES TO BE SOLD HERE SOON

Likely to Raise Price as Change in Size Means New Bake shop Pans

SAY SOMETHING MUST BE DONE

Practically All Large Bakers Agree That Increase Must Come as Flour Mounts

Whether to raise the price of bread to six cents or to reduce the size of the loaf from 16 to 12 ounces will be discussed by Harrisburg bakers at a conference to be held soon, possibly next Monday.

Although there is no bakers' association in Harrisburg, it is understood that the larger producers will attempt to work together agreeably in any sweeping change, such as the present situation demands.

Leftovers Hold Up the Price. "If we could do away with the common practice of the return of stale bread, which is the bakers' greatest source of loss, we could continue to make a full size loaf for a price lower than cost."
