Says Light and Sound Behave Very Differently

Rays of light and rays of sound behave very differently in passing through the air. This is due to the difference in their wave length. In his report on the experiments recently made to find out why the Chicago Auditorium had so many such disturbing echoes, Professor J. C. Watson, of the University of Illinois, explains this as follows:

"It appears that the waves are diffracted or spread out in proportion to their length, the longer waves being spread out to a greater extent. The short waves of light from the sun, for instance, as they come through a window mark out a sharp pattern on the floor, which shows that the waves proceed in straight lines with but little diffraction or spreading. Far different is it from the longer waves of sound. If the window is open we are able to hear practically all the sounds from outdoors, even that of a sand wave spread out and bend at right angles around corners, so that it is almost impossible to get a sound shadow with them."

Furthermore, in the matter of reflection it appears that the area of the reflecting wall must be comparable with the length of the waves being reflected. In the case of light the waves are very minute, hence a mirror can be very small and yet be able to set up a reflection; but sound waves are of greater length, the average wave length of speech (45 cm.) being about 50,000 times longer than the wave length of a yellow light (400 m.), hence the reflecting surface must be correspondingly larger. An illustration will perhaps make this clearer. Suppose a post one foot square projects through a water surface. The small ripples on the water will be reflected easily from the post, but the larger water waves pass by, almost as if the post were not there."

HOW TO MAKE GROCERIES LAST

To save the flour, when making a pudding or pie, add three-quarters of a pound of cold mashed potatoes to every two pounds of flour, mixing in well. The crust will be lighter, and less fat will be required. To make the tea longer, before using spread it in a sheet of paper, and put it in warm oven for ten minutes. This will bring out the flavor and less tea will be required. To save buying eggs for cakes, use a tablespoonful of glycerine to every pound and a half of flour, and the cake will be lighter. To make the candles burn longer, sprinkle some salt around the wicks. The light will be steady and the candle will last a long time.

KAIN WILL DESIGN PLANT

"EAGLE CASE" ENDS IN MIFFLIN COURT

Baum Brothers, State Game Wardens, Found Guilty of Stealing Bird

Lewistown, Pa., Jan. 14.—In the Mifflin county court Tuesday and yesterday, the famous eagle case was tried before a jury. The case is the outcome of the shooting of an eagle by Edward Peffer, of Granville, which he brought to the home of Arthur Pittman, a taxidermist, of Lewistown, to be mounted. Game wardens from Harrisburg appeared and confiscated the bird. Peffer then brought suit against the wardens charging them with larceny of the bird. Peffer, at the time he was arrested, was charged with shooting a protected bird and fined $10, but owing to an alleged typographical error in the printing of the game laws, he was discharged. Peffer said that he did not know what kind of a bird it was when he shot it, but was told later that it was an eagle. He said he was offered $75 for it at the time and more later, and that he brought it to Pittman to be mounted. Pittman, told of getting the bird from Peffer, to mount and of the game wardens, Charles and Arthur Baum, of Harrisburg, coming to him and taking the eagle, telling him that he was under arrest for having the bird in his possession. Dr. Kalbfus, first witness for the defense, said that the defendants were State game protectors, that the bird was brought to him by one of the wardens, and that it was a golden eagle. That it was placed in the State Museum and he has not seen it since. That he had told Peffer, that it was not now and never was his property, he said if he had his way that the eagle would not be protected, as he considered it an injurious bird. The Baum brothers testified to seeing Peffer, and of offering to give him the chance of paying the fine to save cost of prosecution. The defendant's attorneys said that the men acting for the State were clothed with authority to take the bird, that the higher courts had decided that the birds belong to the State and there could be no conviction. The jury brought in a verdict finding Game Wardens Charles and Arthur Baum guilty of larceny of bird. The judge charged the jury that the court would have no power to order the return of the bird if the defendants were found guilty. There will be no passing of sentence by the court here and it is likely that the case will go to a higher court.

STEEL WORKS DOING BETTER

New York, Jan. 14.—The Iron Age says: "Steel works are increasing slightly their rate of operations, and for this week a number of large companies are running at 40 to 50 per cent. of capacity. The Steel Corporation's percentage is 45, and it may be able to increase this shortly to 50, as specifications are better. Taking the trade through the first half of January has brought no new turn. The railroads naturally require some time to canvass and finance their needs and have so indicated in response to intimations that early and very considerable buying was now expected from them. The jury brought in a verdict finding Game Wardens Charles and Arthur Baum guilty of larceny of bird. The judge charged the jury that the court would have no power to order the return of the bird if the defendants were found guilty. There will be no passing of sentence by the court here and it is likely that the case will go to a higher court."

FEWER FATALITIES IN STATE'S MINES

Advance Report Made by State Department of Mines Shows the Decrease in Output
State mine inspectors' reports to the State Department of Mines indicate that there was a decrease in fatal accidents in the mines of Pennsylvania during 1914 and that the production of both bituminous coal and coke fell off, while anthracite remained about the same level as 1913. The bituminous region shows a fine record as regards decrease. In 1913 there were 611 fatalities and 401 last year. Only three persons were killed at one time during the year in this field, the departmental statement saying that "The reduction of accidents in the bituminous field is attributed largely to the rigid enforcement of the part of the inspectors of the many safety and precautionary measures embodied in the mine code of 1911."

Anthracite region reports show 596 fatalities last year against 624 in 1913. In one hard coal accident a mine cage fell down a shaft, killing thirteen, and another killed six, while six were lost by an explosion of gas. It is declared: "It is undoubtedly true with relation to the anthracite region that conditions of safety have been improved by the issuance to the operators in December, 1913, of additional precautionary rules and suggestions for the lessening of the dangers of mining operations. The rule requiring two daily inspections of every working place by the mine foreman or assistant mine foreman, in addition to the other inspections made under the law, has proved efficient as a protection to the workman. Estimates on production are: Anthracite, about 90,000,000 tons, or the same as in 1913; bituminous, 140,000,000 tons, decrease of 34,000,000 tons. Coke production is said to have fallen off 9,000,000 tons, a fact which affects the bituminous coal production as well. The report says: "Other contributing causes were the unsettled conditions produced by national legislation and the European war." Chief James E. Roderick looks for a good year in 1915.

CLEANING POTS AND PANS

Keep at hand a small quantity of coarse cornmeal or coarse wheat bran, and when cleaning greasy cooking utensils rub a handful in the pan, kettle or skillet. You will be surprised how clear of grease it will leave the utensil. Wash it then in good soapy water, scald and set to air before putting away. If one keeps chickens the meal thus used is excellent in their mash feed. If not, fold in a waste paper and burn. This way keeps the sink clean and saves much hard work.
