THE VOICES A MAN HEARS

The International Sunday School Lesson For January 17 is, 'The Call of Gideon,' Gen. 6:11-40. (By William T. Ellis) This morning's mail brought me a letter that sounds like a paraphrase of the first part of this sixth chapter of the Book of Judges.

The new sultan of Egypt is able to recall the days, in which, indeed, he had a part, when oppressions like these were heaped upon the suffering fellahs, before the British came into control of Egypt. At the present moment the same hiding of selves and of animals and of food in caves and wilderness is going on in Palestine, where Turkish oppression is making its last stand.

The Old, Old Perplexity Gideon's first inquiry was in my mind as I talked last night on a late train with a friend who is the executive officer of a charitable society.

Everywhere and always this question has perplexed thinking people. It is the problem of evil in Eden. Why should the godly suffer? The Book of Job deals with it, the Psalms, the prophets and the New Testament refer to it. At least this much we may learn from the present story: Goes does not want us to sit supine and effortless, like Moslems, in the presence of evils that oppress us.

Who sorely needed her care. He could not understand why she desecrated him, saying that he would willingly have brought all the sick and poor that she could attend out to their estate, if only she would pay her father. That rash young woman was more sentimental than sensible; because her friend was called to live in the slums, was no sign that she herself should forsake her duty for a problematical "mission."

FEDERAL SYSTEM IS NOT ATTRACTIVE

Commissioner Smith Makes Interesting Comments Upon the New Financial Conditions

State Commissioner of Banking William H. Smith is of the opinion from what he has observed that officers of banking institutions operating under State charters have determined that any advantages which may accrue to them under the federal system are more than balanced by what they now possess.

The year just closed has been of interest by reason of the amendment to the national laws on banking and the creation of the regional reserve banks. Two thoughts in relation thereto have been of paramount interest—the first, whether it would be advantageous to our banks and trust companies to be associated as members of this system, the other as to their legal right, under the laws of Pennsylvania, to become members if advantages to their respective corporations would thereby result.

One bank under our supervision surrendered its charter and became a national corporation. The report covers 510 institutions, 233 trust companies, 175 state banks, 11 savings institutions, 11 unincorporated savings funds, 2 savings banks in liquidation and 6 trust companies which had not commenced business.

The expenses of the department were $93,332.77, of which $70,299.81 went for examiners' expenses and salaries. The revenue from examination and other fees received by the department was $63,001.84.

The commissioner says that while the year was "one of the most tense anxiety to our financial institutions since the inception of the national bank laws fifty years ago, conservative management followed, and reduction of values and profits had much to do with the fact that there were no failures in consequence. It is stated that the department will continue to work in the same manner in the future.

It is stated that "although not members of the regional banks, our State institutions cannot be denied the benefits which it is believed will accrue therefrom, the first of which is conceded by all bankers to be an elastic currency in case of general panic."

It is stated that the number of trust companies will be further increased this year. In comments it is said that "under the general corporate laws of the State there has been an alarming liberality in the issuance of purchasing investments"; criticism is made of building and loan association funds being loaned through men obtaining large commissions, and it is said that the business of "insuring the completion of building operations in which the investors may not have sufficient funds of their own has been found as dangerous as the business of purchasing investments of contractors."

The commissioner concludes: "Taking into consideration all of the financial institutions embodied in this report, the general condition shows an improvement in methods and a steady increase in resources."

MODERN MUSIC

Men call me Longing; and I come to you To lure and taunt you in the graying dawn Or breathe me even, when, the sun withdrawn, The shallow moon hangs empty in the blue.

Chill Spring is mine, when eager winds pursue The tree-boughs traced with chary fringe of tawn. Aute trenchant blades fresh-pierce the mute questions asked, despaired, and asked anew.

I am that hunger which all mad youth is. Preetful and faint, with fever-burning eye; Its thin arms, dread with sweet content, reach out to wisps that beckon and deny— Strange unresolving chords, and ironies That excite, yet never satisfy.

—Alice Ormond Campbell, in Poetry Magazine.

Some time ago, the senator said, a popular society matron gave a rather elaborate affair in honor of a relative from the East, and wishing to favor a young officer of the militia she had just met she sent him this card: "Mrs. Jones requests the pleasure of Captain Smith's company at a reception at her home on Thursday evening."
