ONLY SKIES GLUM AS PARADE PASSES

going to get a glimpse of the rather spectacular part of the procession—the firemen's division. Most folks kept

In mind the night-long battle the Harrisburg contingent had waged in Market Square and they thought the firemen could hardly have been expected to turn out. But bless the city firemen can parade as well as fight—and an all-night fire job doesn't bother them a bit. That's why the applause was particularly enthusiastic for the firemen's division today.

still disturbing the ears of a city—when cheering down the line of the parade. It was announced that the Governor's train of motor cars approached along the line the cheering broke out afresh.

The, not so long afterward, the music of the bands told that the procession was under way.

"Eyes Right!"

As the right of the line came abreast of the reviewing stand and the new Governor started to utter some words, flags dipped, swords flashed and hundreds of faces turned a white blur toward the commander-in-chief as officers bellowed "eyes right!"

It was each company and each band filed past the stands applauded and the Governor smiled his appreciation.

So the marchers had a taste ever as they started of what was coming all along the line.

In many, many years Harrisburg and its guests will remember the bands that played at Governor Brumbaugh's inauguration. Some of the bands the city entertained a great many thousands of firemen and they had some bands, too. But the thirty-six musical bodies that participated in the parade yesterday were of the kind that played in such a way that you just couldn't make your feet behave.

When Feet Misbehave to "Tipperary"

With one of the Philadelphia bands there came to town a real crowd of killed Scotch bagpipers. And when the band struck up "Tipperary" and the bagpipers played along, take it from the segment of the crowd that happened to be nearby when "Tipperary" accompanied on the bagpipes was tickling the toes of marchers and spectators—somehow, it didn't seem such a long, long way to Tipperary.

The folks from "M G's" home town and "round about were out in force, too—in the crowds certainly but very, very much in evidence in the line of the parade. For instance there was the Marketburg band which headed the Huntington Clubs. That part of the parade incidentally got some cheering on the side from the crowds who let the spirit of welcome to Governor Brumbaugh and all his folks get into their blood.

From the Old Home Town

"Say, mister," called out an urchin as the Huntington delegation got under way, "when y' go past the reviewing stand, git your band 't play, 'Gee, but aint it great to meet a friend from your home town?' That'll make 'em smile."

Whether that is what the band played or not is neither here nor there; but history hath it that Governor Brumbaugh grinned an extra broad grin at the flags and the folks from home, went marching by.

Following the chief marshal and his chief of staff rode Captain Hoy and these special aids to the marshal: Discretionary Michael E. Stroup; Moses Cooper, George Sullivan, William I. Laubenstein, Charles Fry, Isalah Reese, Jr., T. S. Gaut, C. H. Sauters, George Van Dyck, William S. Schibert, Percy Moore, W. H. H. Bickley, Harry Long, R. Jones Reiff, Dr. John Culp, John W. Kelly, Dr. William Hughes, Jacob Eckinger, William Meath, William Berger, George L. Drake, E. C. Buchanan, P. R. Florie, J. C. Shumberger and H. S. Houck.

The Flag Goes By

Col. Joseph E. Hutchison, commander of the Eighth regiment, was marshal of the military division. It was a part of a provisional regiment that consisted of the following headed by the Eighth regiment band:

The first division was made up of military organizations, with staff and Eight regiment band. It consisted of the following:

In the first battalion were Company K, Fourth Infantry, Lancaster; Company A, Eighth, York; Company H, Eighth, Harrisburg; Company I, Fourth, Easton; Company D, Eighth, Harrisburg.

The second battalion consisted of Company A, Fourth, Reading; Company B, Fourth, Allentown; Company D, Eighth, Harrisburg.

The Third battalion was composed of Company I, Fourth, Reading; Company K, Eighth, York; Company G, Eighth, Carlisle; Company F, Eighth, Huntingdon.

The color sergeant of the Eighth infantry carried the regimental colors and the hospital detachment, consisting of six men from the Fourth infantry, Allentown.

In silk hat and frock coat the second or civic division was marshaled by William S. Vane of York, and included the crack Union Republican Club with more than 500 marching men, and the First and Third regiment bands of the Quaker Guard, Harrisburg. The club had a chance to see in those ranks taller men than it has seen in many a day. The Chester county delegation comprised nearly 200 marchers, and the West End Republican club, Lackawanna county club delegations of 400 to 500 men. Harrisburg was equally represented by the Harrisburg Republican Club with the Steelton band, the West End Republican club with the Municipal Band, the Independent Social Club with the Italian Band, with something like a hundred, two hundred and sixty odd marchers respectively. The Hassel Club, the Union Republican Club with seventy-six men and the Steelton Silver Cornet Band and finally the crack South Philadelphia Republican Club organization with more than 500 men in line.

And then came the firemen.

The Fire Fighters

City Commissioner M. Harvey Taylor, head of Harrisburg's fire department, marshaled the division. This consisted of the entire fourteen city fire companies and the big Vigilant Fire company of York, which the firemen of the capital city had here as their guests.

The Yorkites of course looked well—they always do, and an admiring populace remembered the guests from the Codorus during the Firemen's convention. So they were greeted like old friends. But the thousands lining the streets were equally proud of Harrisburg's own fire fighters. The applause that greeted the tramping tramping men all along the line of march testified to that.

And it was the firemen's division incidentally that was the most musical of the number of bands in the division. At the head of the division there was a band. Then followed Commissioner Taylor with the entire membership of the Firemen's Union serving as his aids. And then there was another band and the Vigilant Fire company. Then in order came the city companies each headed by a band as follows:

Friendship, Royal, York; Hope, Sunbury; Citizens, Wisconsin; Washington, Liberty, Middletown; P. G. Wilson, Northumberland; Parkersburg; Good Will, Alfaretta; Huntingdon; Mt. Pleasant, Highspire; Susquehanna, Enola; Reily Hose Newmarket; Shamrock, New Cumberland; Abilene, Hiadax; Camp Curtin, Elizabethtown, and Royal, Lykens band of Lykens.

From as early as noon yesterday the visiting hosts began arriving and from early afternoon until late last night the streets echoed with the tramp of men marching to hotels or to serenading in front of the Philadelphia Republic headquarters at the Board of Trade building, three crack bands kept up an alternating concert nearly all evening. As one band finished a selection, another swung into a new piece.

The Joyous Guests

During the morning hours—up even until a short time before the procession got under way in fact—the arriving train brought additional marchers and bands. Harrisburg's streets were never livelier since the Firemen's convention.

Sometime before noon the olive-drabbed soldiers of the State's guard tramped in from the stations. Then the State constabulary, grim gray-black drabbed policemen, reached town and promptly went to work.

The crowds as a rule were good-natured, justling, good-humored and the city police force aided by the State policeman had little or no trouble. If any visiting clubmen or firemen did happen to get a bit too hilarious during the morning, anxious friends who had the afternoon's splick-and-span parade requirements in mind, hustled the joyous one away to hotel and room and helped him get ready for the afternoon's march.

By a City Leaves Home

During the wee sma' hours Commissioner Taylor and Fire Chief John C. Kindler had the streets in the central section of the reviewing stand roped off. Commissioner of Streets W. H. Lynch saw to it that the streets were in splendid condition for the marchers. All Harrisburg and its guests in a hurried lunch a bit earlier than usual, and—

By noon most homes and hotels and offices and stores were deserted and feet curb, extra boxes, vantage points on steps, porches, office and store windows, and even telephone and telephone poles were occupied with a pretty large share of the populace of Pennsylvania.

GREAT THROINGS CHEER FOR NEW EXECUTIVE

In another part of the Telegraph.

When Governor Tener had congratulated the new Governor he left the stand and taking an automobile was driven to Union station, where he departed for Chicago. He will go to Charlelot on Monday, where the citizens will give him a welcome home in right royal fashion.

As the ceremonies ended and the salutes died away the new Governor and those taking part in the ceremony entered a car and were driven over the route of the parade, returning to the stand to review the procession of military, clubs and firemen, although the latter division was rather slim owing to the service the department was called upon to render last night and to the fact that men were still on duty at Market Square while the parade was in progress.

After the parade the new Governor entertained the inaugural party at luncheon at the Mansion.

Frank B. McClain Is New Lieutenant-Governor; Delivers Strong Speech

Frank B. McClain, former Speaker of the House and Mayor of Lancaster city until yesterday, was inaugurated as Lieutenant-Governor of Pennsylvania in the Senate chamber shortly after 11 o'clock this morning. The ceremonies were extremely simple. At their conclusion Mr. McClain assumed his duties as presiding officer of the Senate and delivered a lengthy but spirited address.

A point that attracted the attention of the senators was the Lieutenant-Governor's recommendation that a law be passed permitting direct appeal to the State Supreme Court when the constitutionality of any act of the Legislature is questioned. He followed vigorously the thought of Governor Brumbaugh that the State is "over-laded" and advocated a short, working session of the Legislature. He deplored the practice of one state department interfering with the functions of another, begged the senators to steer clear of "progressive" and "Republican" are synonymous in the history of Pennsylvania. The full text of Lieutenant-Governor McClain's speech will be found elsewhere.

The Senate then adjourned to attend the inauguration of Governor Brumbaugh and will meet this afternoon.

Among those who occupied seats in the front of the chamber were Rev. Dr. Harry Davis, of Philadelphia, pastor of the Abigail Vane Memorial Methodist Church, who, it was announced, will succeed the Rev. A. C. James, of Amble, as chaplain of the Senate.

The Senate was called to order by President pro tem. Kline and after prayer by the chaplain Senator Snyder's motion to authorize Judge George Kunkel to administer the oath to the new Lieutenant-Governor was adopted. On motion of Senator Graeff a committee was appointed to escort Mr. McClain to the chamber. This committee was made up of Senators Graeff, Gerberich and DeWitt and the appearance of the former Speaker on the floor was greeted with prolonged applause. Immediately after being sworn in he assumed the chair and delivered his address, after which the Senate adjourned to attend the inauguration and to meet again for informal business late this afternoon. Appointments and committee assignments may be expected to-morrow, it was said.

Piano Quality and Appearance

Of course, it is but natural that you would want both in the piano you choose for your home. But did you ever stop to think that the two elements are entirely separate from each other.

Appearance cannot govern the quality of the instrument that you buy. Quality controls appearance only to the extent of the desire of the manufacturer to beautifully "house" his workmanship.

What you really want in a piano is proper production of tone, and an instrument that you will not have to have rebuilt within a year. But those qualities are inside of the instrument—not on the case.

This store the Central Pennsylvania for the Steinway, the Mehlin and the C. M. Sigler pianos gives with each one of these instruments a double guarantee, adding to our own that of the manufacturer.

When you consider pianos, see our salesman. You will not be pressed to buy. But you will have the choice of the finest piano building for your inspection and comparison.
