NEW YORK PLANNING FIRST AERIAL CHURCH

House of Worship May Cap Skyscraper Far Above Earth in Downtown District

New York, Jan. 23.—A church set 500 feet up in the air, topping a lofty skyscraper especially built for this purpose in the downtown district, is now proposed here, if present plans are carried out. The project depends upon the result of a campaign which has been begun among Methodists all over the country. With their completion, the first aerial church will take the place of the tiny structure known as the John Street Church, which now stands surrounded by mighty structures of the financial district. The present structure, which occupies a site valued at nearly half a million dollars, was erected in 1778, only two years after Methodism obtained its first footing in this country. It has been twice rebuilt since then, once in 1814 and again in 1841. A clock presented to the congregation by John Wesley when he preached in the old church is still there. The tentative plans for the new structure have already been drawn. It is planned to be a giant structure with a church on top of cruciform shape. A mammoth cross will stretch along the side of the building facing the ocean so that it can be seen miles out at sea. The plan is to have the steeple loom up 800 feet above the earth with a cross at its apex. About the base of the cruciform church structure, that is, at the top of the building, provision is made for the installation of hidden lights so that the gabled form of the house of worship will shine out in the night. It is planned to have the bulk of the building self-supporting. The church structure, with its illuminated cross, colored windows and dotted lines, will appear to float in the air. The plan is to have the church structure preserve the present site as a memorial to Philip Embury and his little band of twelve who established Methodism in this country, and also to make the church self-supporting. The only feasible way to do this, it is believed, is through the combination of a church and an office building.

The Church Is For You

The church never was, and is not now, a one man institution. The church was never meant for any group of men, or for any particular class of humanity.

There never was and never will be any panacea for the difficulties and sorrows of life other than the Church of Christ, the eternal love of whose founder is sufficient for all of our life. Through Him we commune with the Divine, to whom we all at some time must answer for our years.

He has instituted the church upon earth that through it we may at all times worship Him and receive strength for the ever recurring battles with self and life.

Man enjoys no greater blessing than that the church belongs to everyone without distinction as to rank, wealth, position, nationality or class.

Sooner or later you will recognize that the love of Christ, best taught through His church upon earth, is the remedy for all that in your life is not as it should be. Sooner or later you will embrace that love and teaching. How much better if you did it now, and helped some other one to embrace the same love and make it a part of his life.

The churches of Harrisburg are weekly inviting all men to come to the services on Sunday and to hear the teachings of that love. And to-day goes out the same invitation that you
