THE MASTER KEY BY JOHN FLEMING WILSON

By special arrangement for this paper a photo-drama corresponding to the instalments of "The Master Key" may now be seen at the leading moving picture theaters. By arrangement made with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company it is not only possible to read "The Master Key" in this paper, but also afterward to see moving pictures of our story. COPYRIGHT, 1914, BY JOHN FLEMING WILSON. The wish was fulfilled that afternoon when George Everett turned up and was warmly greeted by both Kane and Dorr. After a few words he asked for Ruth. "You can see that she's all right," John answered quietly, pointing to her as she came up the steps with Sir Donald. Both were in tennis garb, and Ruth was delightfully flushed. Sir Donald made a few pleasant remarks and then excused himself. His quick senses told him that Everett had come on business and that he would be one too many. "I don't know that I have anything new and startling to tell you," Everett told Ruth in answer to her question. "I know a dozen places where I can raise the money to finance your mine, but we must have the deeds, papers and surveys first. And they're gone, I understand." "Yes," Dorr replied bitterly, "I suppose Wilkerson has them. I ought to have been on his trail long ago." Everett glanced at Ruth and saw the discouragement on her face. He went quickly on: "However, I've made temporary arrangements which will relieve you of all trouble for the present, Miss Gallon. I'll talk over the business details with John and Tom Kane." She brightened and laid one hand affectionately on John's arm. "I knew everything would come out all right when John took hold," she said softly. For two days Harry Wilkerson worked steadily and secretly in his room. At last his task was done. "No one can ever prove that old Tom Gallon didn't draw that deed himself," Wilkerson said triumphantly. "And it makes me the owner of the 'Master Key' mine, Jean. And, once in charge, I'll make us both worth millions!" Then— She shrank back at the flame in his gaze upon her. "Now, what are you going to do?" she demanded, attempting to bring the conversation back into business channels. He bit his nails savagely. "Drake is out, all right," he told her. "You see Kane didn't turn up to prosecute the case, and they turned him loose. What do you say to my wiring him to go and take charge of the mine while we decide just what to do? He can see what's going on and warn us." "Dorr and the rest are still at Beverly Hills?" she inquired. "Sure!" he said scornfully. "They're tying up with some bloated Britisher they think has money. They figure on getting him to finance them, I reckon. And I happen to know that Sir Donald couldn't finance anybody. We needn't worry about Dorr."

Mrs. Darnell remained in thoughtful silence awhile and then agreed to the suggestion. Wilkerson immediately wrote the message: Charles Drake, San Francisco, Cal.: Go to Silent Valley at once and take charge of "Master Key" mine until you hear further from me. Am wiring Tubbs, engineer, to this effect. HARRY WILKERSON. When he had sent this and a message to Tubbs he resumed his gloating contemplation of his forged deeds. He did not see the look of burning scorn on Jean's face as she left the room. "Why must I always have to use fools?" she murmured bitterly. "A lovely pair—Wilkerson and Drake!" Drake did not hesitate when he received Wilkerson's telegram. He took the next train for Silent Valley and on arrival there procured a rig and drove to the mine. On his arrival he was dismayed to see that no work was being done. The machinery was idle, and the miners were loafing about the streets or gathered in little sullen groups. They eyed him curiously, but when he asked for Tubbs they made no comment nor asked any questions. Following their directions, he soon found himself on the porch of what had been John Dorr's house. He knocked, and there was shuffling of heavy boots; then the door opened, and an unshaven, bloated faced man asked him gruffly what he wanted. Drake produced Wilkerson's wire, and instantly the engineer showed relief. "Come in! Come in!" he said. "Come in and have a drink!" The interior of the cabin showed that Bill Tubbs had apparently been merely camping out in his new quarters without regard to the decencies. But Drake was not squeamish after his long trip and shared a drink with his host. A few words served to put the situation before him. "There ain't no money to pay the men; the store's closed; the cook shanty ain't running; Wilkerson is away; Dorr hasn't turned up with the money he promised, and I'm just kind of sitting on the lid while the pot boils. I'm mighty glad to see you. Maybe you can do something with these fellows. I've done my best, and I can't do any more."

The words were hardly out of his mouth before there was the noise of boots on the porch, and Tubbs smiled in sickly fashion. "I guess they spotted you right off," he said. "What do they want?" demanded Drake as there came a pounding on the door. Two miners entered, and Tubbs introduced them to Drake. "This is the new boss, boys," he said. "Who sent you here?" was the first question asked. "Wilkerson," responded Drake. "Humph!" "I'm just here to take charge temporarily," Drake went on hastily, not liking the ugly tone of the man's voice. (To be continued Wednesday.)

HEREDITARY PLAYS BIG PART IN LIFE

Commissioner Samuel G. Dixon Discusses Interesting Matters in Weekly Talk

State Commissioner of Health Samuel G. Dixon discusses the influence of heredity on life in general in his weekly talk on hygiene, issued to-day. The commissioner says: "The influence of heredity upon the mental and physical health of the individual has been a deeply discussed question and one on which there is much to say both pro and con. "Almost every physician who has practiced for any length of time can cite instances of individuals who by rigid adherence to the rules of right living and hygiene have triumphed over serious physical handicaps due to heredity. "If you have an individual weakness, whether inherited or not, it is always worth while to try and overcome it. In many cases they can be favorably modified by a continued and faithful effort. "Where the parents suffered from organic or certain forms of communicable disease children may be unfortunate enough to be physically marred beyond any hope of recovery. Fortunately, laws are being enacted to prevent such marriages and stronger than any law is the growing sentiment against these unions to prevent the intensifying of defects. Unfortunately, people too often believe them insurmountable. "We are all familiar with the story of how Demosthenes overcame the physical handicaps which seemed to threaten his career as an orator. "For many years it was the general belief that tuberculosis was an hereditary disease. It has been demonstrated that this is the rare exception. However, when the parents are suffering from tuberculosis there is always a chance of the direct infection of the children and this led to the belief that the disease was inherited. It is true that the children of tuberculous parents may inherit physical conformations that will reduce their resistance to the tubercle bacillus. Therefore, every effort should be made to develop whatever weakness may be inherited, such as narrow chest, etc. "Care, training and perseverance will work wonders in correcting physical or mental defects, whether inherited or the result of individual weakness."

Cobb Will Show "Movies" in Conjunction With Talk

Irvin Cobb, journalist and war correspondent, will give an illustrated talk at the Chestnut Street Auditorium, Thursday evening, in which he will detail some of his experiences in the war zone, while acting as staff correspondent for the Saturday Evening Post. The program will be given in three parts, the first being a general lecture, the second the showing of the pictures and during the third the war correspondent will answer questions propounded by persons in the audience provided, of course, that there shall be nothing asked that might provoke ill feeling or become controversial. Irvin Cobb is one of the best known newspaper writers of our time, although a Southerner by birth, his activities have been mainly confined to work on the important New York dailies. Recently he has devoted his time to writing for the Saturday Evening Post, and his latest publication that he was sent abroad for the outbreak of the present war. Those who have heard him speak are aware that he is an orator of unusual ability and a most capital story-teller.

TELEPHONE SOCIETY MEETING. H. Mauradian will speak before the fifty-fifth meeting of the Telephone Society of Harrisburg to-night at 8 o'clock in the Board of Trade Hall on "Protection of the Telephone Plant Against Lightning." Mr. Mauradian is engineer of transmission.

SUNDAY IS NOT SO HANDSOME AS STOUGH

[Continued from First Page.] utes almost 200 came forward and he closed the service and invited a cooperating minister to make the prayer for the penitents. Crowds were leaving the tabernacle at 9.15. Difference in Personality. The difference between a "Stough" and a "Sunday" campaign seems to be one of personality. Of course, the Philadelphia tabernacle is more than two-thirds as large as the one here, but the setting of the two campaigns and the enthusiastic reception was comparatively the same. Harrisburg was just as well prepared for Dr. Stough by the spirit of churches, the preliminary work, tabernacle preparations and newspaper publicity as Philadelphia was for Sunday—of course making allowances for the differences in size of the two places. "Stough's tabernacle was almost always as crowded as Sunday's, many people were turned away, and the opinion is that the musical support was better. It was the volume of sound from the choir carried better here than it does in Philadelphia. Dr. Stough got an average of about 100 trailblitters at an ordinary week-night service which he held open until 10 o'clock; Billy Sunday often gets 500. "Sunday did not plead for trailblitters, he merely invited them and busy shaking hands a minute after the invitation to do any talking. The penitents came usually alone, and the personal work of church people was not so much in evidence as in Harrisburg. One of the Philadelphia reporters said the personal work by preachers and church people in Philadelphia amounts to almost nothing; they allow "Billy" to do it all and he seems fully capable of doing it. Sunday and Stough as to Looks. "Sunday is not so handsome a man as Dr. Stough. He looks more like a working man; he does not wear a white vest or a frock coat; his suit on Saturday night looked like a $15 hand-

CELEBRATED DOUBLE QUARTET IN "THE OLD HOMESTEAD" AT THE MAJESTIC THURSDAY

"THE FAMOUS QUARTETTE" Up at West Swanzy, six miles below Keena, New Hampshire, is the original "Old Homestead." The villa houses with two or three stores, a blacksmith shop and a grist mill, the latter turned by the waters of the brook. Millions of people have seen Swanzy, yet to the general mind Swanzy is a place having no existence save in the memory of those who have seen it. And so it is after a visit to "The Majestic Thursday, matinee and night, "Bucket" in our ears and the recollection of the "Auld Lang Syne," with its homely beauty to carry away in our hearts, we seem to have gone back for a few hours to the hills and valley once more among the scenes that will live in our memories.—Advertisement.
